CHINESE SLAUGHTERED IN CHARGE

Fighting Men Are Alike.

She Killed Two, Law Kills One.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

HODGE, Cal., Feb. 10.

OUT OF TOKIO, across the Pacific, and overland to this Mojave country comes the news that Junnusoke Inouye, formerly Japan's finance minister, was murdered yesterday. He was killed because he disapproved of Japan's war in China. He talked peace, and those that do not want it shot him three times.

That is not "Asiatic barbarism;" it is the usual thing. When the great war began, Jean Jaures, one of the ablest men in France, was murdered. His crime was the same as that of Junnusoke Inouye—he did not approve the war.

Even in this enlightened country we were ready to jail anybody not in favor of hanging the Kaiser, and you were not a good American if you refused to believe that Germans were crucifying enemy soldiers alive, against barn doors and other locations convenient for driving nails. Human beings are much alike, especially when they fight.

JAPAN PROPOSES the creation of various, extensive "neutral zones," near big cities in China. Washington and the League of Nations, horrified, declared:

"That means the partition of China."

What else do Japanese activities in Manchuria mean? Does any one think Japan went there for exercise?

AND WHAT OF our own western civilization? Did it not partition Poland, as calmly as any father ever carved a turkey? And what of the partition and carving that followed the big war? What happened to Austria, to Germany and German colonies? There seems to be a little hypocrisy among Christian nations.

THROUGH ITS ABLE and usually very conservative president, William Green, the American Federation of Labor tells what it wants. It demands relief from the national government in the form of a great public works program, that would supply employment "at prevailing rates of wages on all government jobs."

THE PROGRAM demands beer, with two and seventy-five one hundredths per cent alcohol. The federation, like a famous Englishman, may well be "amazed at its own moderation." Two seventy-five is weak beer.

The labor program demands higher taxes on big incomes and inheritances. A five-day week and deportation of any Chinese sailors in this country.

Higher taxes on successful men would persuade those men that this is not the time to start any new labor-employing enterprises. Labor, being intelligent, should know that big business does not work entirely for its health, or to supply politicians with taxes for their amusement.

HIGHER TAXES are coming anyhow, without help from organized labor. The Treasury finds it will need to collect in taxes $1,241,000,000 more than last year, to carry out Mr. Mellon's budget program.

This means $321,000,000 more than Mr. Mellon's own estimate. If you have a big income, prepare to change YOUR budget.

RUTH JUDD, who murdered two women in Phoenix, Ariz., is found guilty, in the first degree. Alienists could not convince the jury that she was insane.

She knew what she was doing, when she killed her two best friends, cut up their bodies and packed up the pieces, intending to throw them into the Pacific Ocean.

SHE KILLED the women, so the law will kill her. She chopped up her victims, the law will hang its victim, and strangle her to death. She was jealous, the law is outraged.

She is declared sane, and the law is supposed to be sane. But it will be called savage and barbarous, by a real civilization that will succeed this imitation.

As to Ruth Judd's sanity, evidence showed that she was passionately and horribly jealous of the two women murdered. Everyone knows that intense jealousy is a form of insanity.

NATIONAL POLITICS becomes interesting ahead of time. Former Gov. Smith says he is not a CANDIDATE, only willing to run if the Democratic convention wants him. He has no political headquarters, is not spending a cent to get the nomination, not even for postage stamps.

A candidate, says Gov. Smith, is one who seeks delegates and makes a campaign before the convention meets. Gov. Smith will take the nomination, if it is laid down before him. He does not choose to run for it.

THIS DISTINCTION contains no great difference. Gov. Smith knows politics and need not seem to run for what he wants. He has plenty of friends working for him.

Gov. Roosevelt's manager says his candidate will be nominated by the Democrats on the first ballot. He is mistaken. It takes two-thirds of the delegates to nominate, and more than one-third will wait and see.

Gov. Smith's statement threatens Gov. Roosevelt's candidacy, especially. Democratic managers, anxious to win, will know that Alfred E. Smith's supporters, numbering millions, in case Smith is pushed aside, would resent the nomination of Roosevelt more than any other.

THE NOMINATION least harmful to Democratic chances, least apt to offend friends of Gov. Smith, would be the nomi-

Mrs. Dreyfuss Pirates' New Owner

ONLY WOMAN MAGNATE IN BASEBALL

Estate Believed Worth Millions Willed to Kin; Fund for Grandchildren

The new owner of the Pittsburgh Pirates is Mrs. Florence Dreyfuss, only woman owner in the major leagues.

She became the majority stockholder when the will of her husband, Barney Dreyfuss, was filed for probate today, disposing of an estate estimated unofficially at several million dollars.

The bulk of the estate was left to the widow. Two trust funds of $25,000 each were bequeathed to two grandchildren. They were Barney Dreyfuss II, son of the Sam Dreyfuss, who died a year ago, and William D. Benswanger, son of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Benswanger. The principal of each fund will be given the children when they become of age.

A trust fund of $20,000 provides for its income to be paid to a sister, Franziska Willstavt, of Berlin, Germany, the principal to revert to the estate at her death.

An undetermined amount was cited as a trust fund belonging to another sister, Betty Welte, of Freiberg, Germany, for which he was trustee. This fund is to be paid in full at earliest possible date, the will stipulated.

Famous Turf Trophy Willed to Dreyfuss

CINCINNATI, Feb. 10.—(INS.)—Attorneys for the estate of Col. Alexander S. Labold, once a wealthy turfman and liquor dealer, asked themselves today what they will do with a handsome race horse trophy which Col. Labold bequeathed to Barney Dreyfuss.

Labold died about the time Dreyfuss was stricken, but the will was made several months before. The cup was won at the Latonia races here many years ago by Chulita, then a famous horse.

Col. Labold left the remainder of the estate, valued at $2,500, to Mrs. John L. Horgan, wife of a Cincinnati hotel manager.

Mad Trapper Escapes Mounties in Tunnel

EDMONTON, Alberta, Feb. 9.—(INS.)—Albert Johnson, crazed Indian trapper, wanted for the murder of one officer and the serious wounding of another, apparently had made good his escape today for the fifth time from a squad of Canadian Royal mounted policemen. As an airplane hovered with bombs over his log fortress cabin on the Yukon trail, mounted police discovered the trapper had tunneled his way from the cabin to the underbrush and liberty.

Public Will Absorb Vast Issue of Prosperity Bonds

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER.

THE PASSING of the third and worst winter of the depression, without any clear indication of economic recuperation, is weakening popular hopes of a spontaneous business recovery.

Accordingly, management in the large is challenged to regiment economic forces along constructive lines.

The Hoover method of seeking to heighten recovery by acting as national cheer leader has been proved futile.

The newer administration technique of dissipating federal funds in so-called reconstruction schemes for financing the financiers is also destined to lead to a blind alley.

The thoroughgoing cure for the malady of widespread inactivity is a soundly conceived program of ACTIVITY.

THE CYCLE downward has proceeded too far to rely on a change of heart by depressed business men to reverse the tides.

The federal government, with its superb credit, is uniquely in position to take decisive action.

Instead of wasting its precious credit in debatable schemes to restore lost value, it should embark on a JOB-CREATING, CONSTRUCTIVE PROGRAM FOR THE CREATION OF NEW VALUES.

Instead of ineffectually dealing with symptoms of the depression, Congress should go directly to the fundamental causes, and seek to react upon them.

Wholesale liquidation of debt has greatly reduced bank deposits, which in our credit economy constitute the chief medium of exchange.

Such deflation has moved in a vicious circle, each layoff causing additional depression.

BY FLOATING a $5,000,000,000 prosperity loan to finance national, state and local public works, the government will inject a vast amount of additional purchasing power into an economic situation which has been progressively languishing from decreasing buying power.

The summoning directly and indirectly of several millions of idle persons back to work through a public works program will quickly have a tonic effect on all trades and industries.

Family heads will buy freely as soon as they are returned to payrolls.

The demand for raw materials needed in public works will stimulate the ultra depressed trades which cater to the greatly subnormal construction industry.

If properly dramatized after the manner of the Liberty Loan drives, a campaign to sell to the people $5,000,000,000 of bonds for social reconstruction and for the re-employment of the idle will succeed.

Such a drive will go far toward bringing back into the banking system $1,300,000,000 in hoarded currency.

Perplexed persons, uncertain as to what to do with the remnant of their capital, will welcome the opportunity to buy government bonds, the safest investment in the world.

THE MARKETING process must be raised above routine lines. It must be transformed into a great nation-wide co-operative undertaking.

Investors, as in war time, should be encouraged to borrow and buy.

This will tend to bring many of the bonds temporarily into the loan portfolios of member banks. These new securities, which are eligible collateral for bank loans at the Federal Reserve, will enable the banks to tap part of the vast unused reserves of the Federal Reserve system.

This is no time for BANK hoarding of gold.

The Prosperity Bonds will be an instrument for expanding bank credit and utilizing sterilized gold.

With vast excess reserves accumulated in the Federal Reserve system, there is no danger of unhealthy inflation.

FESS FIGHTS JOB RELIEF BY U. S.

G. O. P. Leader Pounds Desk, Cuts Hand as He Shouts Denunciation of Two Bills

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—The administrations fight against direct federal relief for the unemployed was opened in the Senate this afternoon by Senator Simeon D. Fess, of Ohio, chairman of the Republican National Committee.

So excited that he cut his hand while pounding his desk, Fess argued as he wiped the blood from his knuckles:

"If either the La Follette-Costigan bill or the Democratic substitute becomes a law, the flood gates will be opened.

"We will enter on a policy that you and I will never see the end of—the tax burden for support of the unemployed will be simply staggering."

LOCAL AID AMPLE

Fess insisted local relief efforts had not broken down, but said if private charities fell short, municipalities should increase taxation.

Senator Norris interrupted to ask:

"Isn't it the fairest way to get relief funds by taxing all the people."

Fess shouted back:

"I do not agree."

Norris countered:

"Then I suppose the Senator means that part of the people who are charitably inclined and liberal must bear all the burden of relief."

VIEWS WITH ALARM

Fess painted an alarming picture of "political control" over the government by the nation's idle men and women. He asserted:

"If the federal government enters the new field of feeding the unemployed, it will start to build a political organization more powerful than any group in existence today."

Asked by Senator Copeland (Dem.), of New York, whether he would favor federal aid if persuaded that the local communities, even by increasing taxation, were unable to cope with the situation, Fess replied:

"Yes, but only if there was starvation and no other relief available."

M'GOVERN RUNS OUT JOBLESS

Commissioner Charles C. McGovern today jumped upon a counter in the Commissioners' office in the courthouse and told more than 125 job seekers, whose numbers overflowed into the hall, that there were no jobs for them and that hereafter no "receptions" would be held on Wednesdays to listen to the stories of the unemployed.

McGovern was verbally supported by Commissioner C. M. Barr. McGovern said:

"Jobs never were given over this counter and never will be. Whatever success you may have in getting jobs will have to come through the representatives in your districts. There are not enough jobs to go 'round. Those in need should go to the Emergency Association."

COUNCILMEN JOIN WAR ON RATES

Estimate Cost of Test Case To Force Cut in Gas And Elsctric Charges Here

The majority of City Council members today were on record favoring a fight on excessive electric and gas rates. The attack was being led by Councilman Charles Anderson. Other members extended their support to a similar attack on all excessive public utility tariffs.

An estimated cost on electric and gas rate test cases before the Pennsylvania Public Service Commission was being prepared by City Solicitor Charles A. Waldschmidt.

The information will be embodied in a report asked by Anderson during a finance committee meeting yesterday. Anderson, favoring utility rate reductions, said he felt the time was opportune for such action and a possible councilmanic appropriation to bring about a test case.

$60,000 COST SEEN

Discussing possibilities of such action, Anderson asked Waldschmidt his estimate on the expense of conducting such a case. Waldschimdt answered:

"At a rough guess I would say that at least $60,000 would be needed."

Assistant City Solicitor Charles P. Lang, in charge of public utilities litigation for the city, is on record as favoring a test case to force rate reductions. In an exclusive interview with the Sun-Telegraph, Lang asserted the time was "now ripe" for such action. Recommendations that such procedure be inaugurated would have to be made to Council by Waldschmidt, Lang said. No comment on this prospect would be made by the City Solicitor until his report to Anderson is completed.

Meanwhile other members of Council available for statements were of opinion that rates should be lowered, but several preferred not to commit themselves definitely on whether a Councilmanic appropriation would be provided until the Law Department completes its survey. Their opinions follow:

PRESIDENT JOHN S. HERRON—I am in favor of rate reductions and I think the time is coming when we will get them. Council will be ready to listen to any suggestions and recommendations the law department might make and will then take such action as it sees fit.

W. Y. ENGLISH—I have been giving the matter much thought. Until I have completed my investigations I don't want to hazard too definite a statement. My preliminary thought on the subject is to divide the cost of a fair rate test case among the boroughs, townships and cities in the Pittsburgh district on a co-operative basis. Perhaps this would work out for the benefit of all concerned.

P. J. McARDLE—If the law department will indicate that it believes it can sustain a case for the reduction in the city on electric and gas rates, based on a knowledge of the situation, then I will be glad to support whatever measures are necessary in Council to enable them to do so.

CLIFFORD B. CONNELLEY—I haven't studied the matter thoroughly, but offhand I want to say that I favor reductions in electric light and gas rates, as well as all high public utility charges. I'll have a more definite statement later.

HARRY A. LITTLE—Gas and electric rates should be reduced and reduced at once. I'll support any legislation recommended to bring this possibility about.

WILLIAM J. SOOST—Rates are high. I'd like to see them lowered.

HEAVY GUNS POUNDING SHANGHAI SECTOR

More Troops Landed Under Cover of Firing; Japan Ready for Big 'Push'

FLOYD GIBBONS
Somewhere in the War Zone Beyond Communication

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—(INS.)—Efforts were made today to reach Floyd Gibbons, International News Service correspondent in the Shanghai war zone.

In response to inquiry, Dixon Hoste, staff correspondent in Shanghai, wired:

"Gibbons out in field somewhere. Hoste."

A later message from Hoste stated Gibbons had gone out to join Chinese army headquarters in the Woosung district.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 11, Thursday, (1 a. m.)—Chinese troops which several times charged the Japanese defenses in the Kiangwan area were driven back with heavy loss of life when Japanese machine guns decimated their ranks, it was learned early today.

The Chinese charges began at 2:15 p. m. Wednesday. The Japanese lines, protected by barbed wire and strong machine-gun emplacements, finally repulsed the Chinese, who at length were forced to surrender almost half a mile of hard-won ground.

Later in the day, Japanese artillery resumed their terrific bombardment of the North Station area, destroying a block of buildings 150 yards from the International Settlement boundary along the west side of Paoshan road. The destruction cleared a large area in the neighborhood of the station, improving the Japanese field of fire.

REDS ACTIVE

Communist agitators are circulating through the Chinese lines, urging soldiers of the 19th Route Army to join with the Shanghai populace in a general strike against foreign imperialism, including that of the Japanese.

Sharply at 5 o'clock last night, the heaviest guns of the Japanese forces boomed out what was believed to be the beginning of an extensive final attempt to drive Chinese troops out of the Shanghai area.

The heavy guns furiously shelled the Chinese positions in the northern section of the Chapei area, and simultaneously a continuous machine gun fire broke out along most of the 16-mile front from Shanghai to Paoshan.

SUDDEN ATTACK

The attack came suddenly, but not unexpectedly, following a day and night of comparative quiet.

Many new fires immediately broke out in the Chapei area behind the North Station, following the renewed bombardment, lighting up the sky.

Foreshadowing the arrival of heavy new infantry reinforcements in preparation for the long-awaited drive, Japanese military authorities requested the Shanghai Pilots' Association to hold 16 pilots in readiness to take Japanese vessels through the Whangpoo river during the next few days.

The request was made shortly after additional Japanese troops had been landed from the steamer Taifu Maru.

CHINESE CHIEFS JOIN JAPANESE

By EDWARD HUNTER
International News Service.

HARBIN, Feb. 10.—Gen. Ma Chan-Shan, Chinese hero of Taitsihar, and Gen. Chang Ching-Hui, independent Governor of Heil-Ung-Kiang, have joined the Japanese forces, a diplomatic victory for Japan more important to imperial ambitions in Manchuria than the conquest of Harbin.

This triumph of Japanese negotiations brings within reach their aim to set up a Manchurian republic or constitutional monarchy not later than February 11. The invaders are working frantically to accomplish this end at least before the arrival of the League of Nations commission of inquiry.

The armies of the Chinese generals will be employed, Japanese sources stated, to form a nucleus of a Manchurian militia to stamp out opposition to the Tokio regime and act as replacements for the Japanese army of occupation which will be withdrawn as soon as possible.

24 Chinese Women Soldiers Killed Defending Woosung

By EDNA LEE BOOKER
International News Service.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 10.—A fighting unit of 24 Chinese women soldiers was wiped out in a brave defense of the village of Woosung when it was invaded by Japanese forces two days ago, it was revealed today.

The modern Amazons, fully armed with old-fashioned rifles and long bayonets, had been guarding the road on the outskirts of the village, according to Carl Lemcke and Harvey Duncan, American business men, who encountered them Monday.

Today the two Americans returned to the village for the purpose of photographing the strange soldiers, only to learn that Japanese now occupied the posts which had been held by the women troops, and that the women had been wiped out in the Japanese advance.

The women soldiers halted Duncan and Lemcke, pointing their bayonets menacingly, as the men attempted to proceed along the Woosung road. They were ordered not to go on. The men got out of their car, amazed to find the strange soldiers.

They were garbed in ordinary blue coolie-cloth coats and the trousers of their countrywomen. Some wore earrings, and some hobbled about on tiny, closely-bound feet. All were heavily armed.

The women were simple country folk, the Americans said, who had exchanged the hoe for the gun in an emergency to protect their homes. They had defended them to the death.

The dead man was tentatively identified as Jacob Levine, 30, who came here a short time ago from either Philadelphia or New York. Edward Weiss, 25, was wounded by four bullets.

tional currency and credit without reaching the legal limits.

NOW IS the time to mobilize reserve economic strength, and to use it soundly for socially desirable purposes.

Of what avail is excellent governmental credit, unless it is to be USED in an economic emergency when more than 7,000,000 workers are hopelessly trudging the streets without jobs?

Even continuance of good governmental credit is contingent on a revival of normal economic processes.

Mere waiting tends only to deepen the depression, and to uncover fresh sorespots.

No individual or firm feels large enough to buck the trend, single-handed.

However, if the government embarks on a far-reaching public works program, private interests will sense a turn, and will help along the process of recovery by jumping on the bandwagon.

FORTY-SIX EMINENT economists in a joint memorandum have certified to the feasibility of floating a Prosperity Loan, and have indicated that it is the most practical means of inaugurating economic recovery.

In floating the bonds, the government will not be competing with private business for capital.

On the contrary, the bonds will be the basis of a healthy credit expansion, which will ease the pressure on business men and arrest the decline in the price level.

The present economic depression tests the capacity of the American people to act collectively in time of peace to accomplish a socially useful objective.

The sooner the plan is envisaged and launched the more effective will the counter deflationary campaign prove.

MRS. JUDD CALM AS JAIL POSTS DEATH WATCH

Trunk Slayer Undisturbed And Sleeps 'Like Kitten;' Suicide Attempt Feared

International News Service.

PHOENIX, Ariz., Feb. 10.—Arizona today had posted the death watch on Winnie Ruth Judd, doomed to be hanged for killing her friend, Agnes Anne Lerot, X-ray technician at a Phoenix hospital.

Arizona charged Mrs. Judd, the 27-year-old wife of a California physician, with killing Mrs. Lerot and Hedvig Samuelson, over the affections of a Phoenix millionaire "playboy," and with shipping their bodies in trunks to Los Angeles. She was tried on the Lerot charge. A jury deliberated two hours and 40 minutes to find her guilty of first degree murder and under Arizona law fixed the penalty at death on the gallows.

Apparently undisturbed, Mrs. Judd slept the night of the verdict and last night "like a kitten," according to a jail matron who was assigned to the cell to prevent a possible suicide attempt by the emotionless "velvet tigress."

Mrs. Judd's attorneys prepared to appeal.

CARD REVEALS GIRL'S MURDER

Maria Rosales was found dead by police in an untenanted apartment of a house just east of Fifth avenue, in the upper city. Her head was crushed with a gas stove burner. The body lay in a bathtub partially filled with water.

The body was found after post-office officials turned over to police a plain unsigned postal card addressed to the janitress of the building, a block from the girl's home. The message was:

"Go to the top-floor apartment. You will find something that will surprise you. It's a murder."

LOAN FORCED ON HAITI

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—(INS.)—The American State Department by "suggestion and constant pressure forced a $16,000,000 loan upon the Haitian people," George Leger, island lawyer, charged today before the Senate Finance Committee.

There was no demand on the part of the people of Haiti for the loan, Leger asserted, adding:

"It was used and is still being used for political purposes."

Senator Johnson (Rep.), of California, author of the resolution under which the investigation was launched, said today he will press for an early hearing upon his two bills to regulate foreign loans made by American financiers.

U. S. AWAITING FINISH FIGHT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—The opinion is growing in Washington that China and Japan must fight out their differences in the Shanghai area and reach a military decision before further peace overtures can well be made to Japan by foreign governments.

Through 14 days of fighting, the international peace plan and various attempted local truces have failed and there seems little the United States, Great Britain, France and Italy can do but keep up their representations to Japan against the dangers to the International Settlement and the French concession.

TOKIO, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Foreign Minister Kenkichi Yoshizawa announced today he had under consideration a plan to send envoys to the United States, England and France to explain and clarify the Japanese position on the Manchurian question.

JAPAN'S PEACE CLAIM JEERED AT GENEVA

Tokio Envoy Enraged as League Delegates Laugh At Pledge to Halt War

International News Service.

GENEVA, Feb. 10.—The League of Nations today awaited more facts and more time before acting on the troublous Shanghai situation, following another Chinese plea for action against Japan.

As before, China was told to be patient.

The council was told by Dr. W. W. Yen, Chinese spokesman, who pointed out that a week ago the principal western powers had described to Japan the situation as being "impossible."

"China cannot yield further."

Today, he said, the situation is worse.

M. Sato, Japanese delegate, told the special session:

"My government has no intention of continuing the hostilities in Shanghai."

At this point the whole meeting broke out in laughter, and the chairman's gavel was required to restore order. The Japanese diplomat was angered at this, and hastily added:

"I do not know what the public thinks, but up to the present, our acts have been prompted by the provocation of our opponents."

Japan Hints at Russ Peril in Arms Parley

GENEVA, Feb. 10.—(INS.)—With a significant veiled reference to Soviet Russia, the spokesman of Japan laid his country's views on disarmament before the world disarmament conference here today.

Tsuneo Matsudaira, Japanese ambassador to Great Britain and chief of Japan's delegation to the arms parley, declared that "notwithstanding the unfortunate situation far out in Eastern Asia," Japan was "as eager as ever" to further the cause of disarmament. He added:

"However, particular attention should be directed to the armed strength and political status of neighboring countries which have a dominant influence upon the safety of others."

Matsudaira followed Dino Grandi, of Italy. Premier Mussolini's youthful foreign minister laid before the conference a sweeping plan of disarmament, going farther in his demand for abolition of land, sea and air instruments of destruction than any other spokesman heard thus far, seconding the proposals made by Great Britain and the United States and augmenting them with some of his own.

Shanghai Refugees Arrive in Manila

MANILA, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Small groups of women and children, refugees from the fighting at Shanghai, arrived here today on the liners President Van Buren and Empress of Russia.

The steamer left Manila for China yesterday. It will stop at Hongkong and then go to Chinwangtao for the passengers to visit Peiping.

Japanese Students Scoring War Held

TOKIO, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Twenty-five students at the Imperial University here were arrested today for participating in a demonstration in which handbills were distributed urging the people to "stop this imperialistic war!"

The demonstration was believed to be the first protest against the military operations in China since the Manchurian campaign began.

Moy announced that more than $2,000 has been pledged by the 23 Chinese residents here toward a "war chest" to be sent to Shanghai.

British Evacuation Of Citizens Urged

LONDON, Feb. 10.—(INS.)—Evacuation of British nationals from Shanghai was suggested by George Lansbury, leader of the Labor opposition, in the House of Commons this afternoon.

This step, Lansbury declared, would prevent British Marines from clashing with either the Japanese or Chinese and make it unlikely that Great Britain would become involved in the Far Eastern dispute.

EDGAR WALLACE, WORLD-FAMOUS MYSTERY AUTHOR, DIES

CAREER MARKED BY PROLIFIC WRITING

Finished 2 Novels a Month, Wrote 1,400 Stories, 20 Plays, 1 Worth $100,000

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Edgar Wallace, who became one of the world's most prolific and highest paid writers after starting life as a newsboy in the slums of London, died this morning at 4:45 o'clock. Death was due to double pneumonia. He was 56.

Mr. Wallace

The noted author of mystery stories was stricken Sunday with influenza. Pneumonia developed Monday, and since yesterday the writer had been in a semi-conscious condition.

At his bedside when he died were his secretary of many years, Robert Curtis; Walter Huston, the actor, and his physician.

Wallace came to Hollywood from his home in England several months ago to write scenarios for the RKO-Radio Studios.

RAPID WRITER

Known especially for his mystery novels, which he often wrote as rapidly as two a month, Wallace was one of the most distinguished writers of the day.

At 10 he sold papers on the streets and his education in school stopped at that age. At 11 he engaged himself as a cabin boy on a trawler which later cruised the North Sea. When 18 he enlisted as a private soldier and saw service in South Africa for the period of the Boer War.

During his six years of active campaigning he developed a latent talent for writing. He began first by patterning after the man he most admired, Kipling, writing vigorous poetry of soldier life.

FOUNDED PAPER

After the Boer War, he founded the Rand Daily Mail, the first English newspaper in South Africa. While editing the paper he began writing adventure stories which were eagerly sought by publishers in London.

During his career, he wrote approximately 200 novels, between 1,300 and 1,400 short stories and 20 plays.

Funeral arrangements probably will await the arrival of Mrs. Wallace, who, on hearing of her husband's illness, arranged passage to New York on the liner Majestic, which sailed today.

HUGE SALE IN U. S.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—A million and a half of Edgar Wallace's books have been sold in the United States, his publishers estimated today. Throughout the world, however, 5,000,000 copies are sold yearly. One-quarter of all the books sold in England last year were written by him.

He has written about 12 books a year, employing a voice recording device and two secretaries. It took him about two weeks to write a book, and a week-end was usually enough for a play.

Verse, novel, detective thriller, and drama poured from his pen as if from an inexhaustible well.

He developed his flair for thrilling readers or theater audiences just as the fad for such stories was at its height in both England and America.

He became a "natural" for the movies, and heading for California in December, 1931, he said he expected to write one story a week. But this schedule was cut to a total of four stories in two months.

$100,000 FOR PLAY

Wallace was gray-haired, portly and claimed to be as lazy as he looked. He smoked continously, four full packages of cigarets a day, and said he had kept up that rate for 30 years. He explained:

"When I'm working, 16 hours a day isn't unusual. The difficult thing is to get started. I sit and think about work for an hour or so, then plunge in. When I get started I can't stop."

His most profitable piece of labor was the play, "On the Spot." He wrote it in two days and received $100,000 for it.

MISS MARGARET STRONG . . . . . HER ACCOSTER ARRESTED

ROB DOWNTOWN GAS STATION FOURTH TIME

Two-Gun Bandit Cuts Phone Wires in Fourth Robbery; Girl's Screams Foil Thug

A cautious, two-gun robber held up the Atlantic Refining Company service station, Bigelow boulevard and Telegraph square, early today, and escaped with $138.

It was the fourth holdup of the station in the past three months.

With both guns leveled, the gunman forced the attendant, John Koelker, of 1423 Brownsville road to open the safe. Paul Shriver, Koeler's companion, was held at bay.

PHONE WIRE CUT

Before opening the safe, the thief severed the telephone wire with the butt of one of his revolvers. After the thief had departed Koelker said he placed the wire ends together to call police.

A police radio car searched the Hill district, but no trace of the bandit could be found.

Alleged to have attempted to rob Margaret Strong, of 3437 Shadeland avenue, while she was walking in Gerber street, Harold Melvin, 17, of 1712 Marquis street, was held for court on a serious charge today.

SAVED BY SCREAMS

Miss Strong told police how the man, with gun drawn, approached her near her home. She said she gave him her purse, but he held her by the throat to stifle her screams. She said:

"I am no coward. I gave him my purse, but he dropped it on the street. He warned me not to scream, but I screamed my head off. He ran when a woman across the street opened the door."

The officers, Nick Battis and Lee Fitzgerald, said that when they responded to Miss Strong's scream for help they saw Melvin running away and captured him after a short chase. Melvin denied threatening her with a gun, police said.

'BUD' STILLMAN TO BE DOCTOR FOR NEEDY

Plans to Aid Poor After Graduation, Shunning Career of Wealth, Fame

International News Service.

BOSTON, Feb. 10.—Life as an ordinary doctor, administering to the poor and needy, is the pathway chosen by James A. (Bud) Stillman when he graduates in June from Harvard Medical School.

That the heir to a large fortune will take a place of virtual obscurity in the medical field instead of becoming a specialist administering to the wealthy, was revealed today by friends and fellow students in a copyrighted story in the Boston American.

Stillman, due to be a daddy before he is a doctor, is a daily attendant at the clinic of the Free Hospital for Women in Brookline.

In their modest Brookline home, Mrs. Lena Stillman, former Canadian backwoods girl, patiently awaits the coming of the stork.

Stillman is specializing in diagnoses and symptoms of women's ailments under Dr. William P. Graves and others. All of his practical application to the problems of medicine and surgery, outside his attendance at Harvard, has been among "free" patients.

To hundreds of women patients at the clinic he is known as "doctor," although he has not yet received his degree. According to physicians at the clinic, the tall, young man coated in white, with reddish hair, is well liked by all the patients.

To his patients his name means nothing. They are unaware that he is the son of the New York banker and Mrs. Fifi Fowler McCormick.

Borough Too Poor To Employ Police

GREENSBURG, Pa., Feb. 10.—Southwest Greensburg borough will be forced to forego its proposed police force, due to a shortage in its finances.

Council discussed the petition of property owners for full time police protection, but found it was unable to go ahead with the petition unless a raise in taxes was made. At present the borough has two officers, who investigate law violations only when called.

Catholic Churches Observe Ashes Rite; Many Sermon Series Will Mark Season

Ash Wednesday, the beginning of the 40-day period of penance designated as Lent, was celebrated throughout the Pittsburgh district today with observance in churches of many denominations.

Following masses in Catholic churches, ashes were placed upon the foreheads of the penitents. In many Protestant churches communion was observed.

Lawrence O'Connell, of the Sacred Heart Church, Shady avenue and Walnut street, tonight will deliver the first of a series of Wednesday sermons on "The See of Peter in a Struggle for Freedom." His subject will be "Athanasius and Julian the Apostate." The Rev. James M. Gillis, of the Paulist Fathers, New York City, will conduct the Sunday evening Lenten services in the church.

A three-day retreat for men of the Holy Name Society will be conducted by Father Gillis from March 10, 11 and 12.

A series of seven Lenten hours of worship will be held in St. Luke's Evangelical Lutheran Church, West View, to continue through March 23.

Lenten services in English will be held each Wednesday night in the Bethlehem Evangelical Lutheran Church, Excelsior street. German services will be held each Thursday night.

EVENING, NOON MEETINGS

Pastoral letters signed by Bishops Chartrand, of Indianapolis, and John F. Noll, of Fort Wayne, urged parishioners to do everything in their power to aid the poor.

BELLS OF LENT HALT CARNIVAL

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—The bells of St. Louis Cathedral today called the faithful to repentance and drove the spirit of Mardi Gras back to the land of fantasy long before dawn scattered the mist from the Mississippi River.

At 11:55 last night, Jackson square—Place D'Armes—seethed with humanity hilariously alive with the carnival urge which makes old men do childish things.

Five minutes later the bells of the old church boomed their warning that the Lenten season had arrived.

Masks were lifted before the first notes died away, and the Mardi Gras was closed officially in the old quarter which follows rigidly the rule that the carnival must be forsaken the minute Lent arrives.

CITY MAY BUILD TOW GARAGE

Police department heads will submit to City Council tomorrow their recommendations for sites from which a choice may be made for construction of a municipal garage for the storage of cars towed away for parking violations.

A new state law compels the city to refund the towing charge should the car owner win a court appeal.

Under the present system, where the car is taken to a "concession" garage, the proprietor keeps the towing charge.

Plans for such a garage were discussed by Director of Public Safety James M. Clark, Superintendent of Police Peter P. Walsh, Traffic Inspector Jacob Dorsey and City Solicitor Charles A. Waldschmidt at a conference today.

AIR UNION BACKS FIRED PILOTS

CHICAGO, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—The Air Line Pilots' Association, which claims a membership of 500 fliers and is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, has decided to stand behind the 23 Century Air Lines pilots discharged yesterday after they declined to accept a new wage scale.

President David Behncke, after a meeting last night, announced all pilots who enter the employ of the Century Lines under the new rate of pay will be permanently barred from the association. The discharged men will be cared for by the union's benefit fund.

The 23 fliers turned down pay of $5 an hour for night and $3 an hour for day flying with a monthly minimum guarantee of $150, threatening to strike if former flat salaries of $350 to $375 a month were not restored. The company announced it would hire other pilots.

Seventeen planes were grounded as the result of the disagreement.

LEAGUE ENVOYS HERE; 'ON TRIAL'

The League of Nations, in trying to settle the Sino-Japanese conflict, is on trial, the Earl of Lytton, chairman of the league's commission which will investigate that conflict, said today in Pittsburgh. He added:

"If the league fails, its prestige will be damaged. If it is successful, of course its prestige will be greater."

With three other members of the commission, the Earl of Lytton reached New York last night. They were joined by the United States representative, Maj. Gen. Frank Ross McCoy, and passed through Pittsburgh today on the Pennsylvania Railroad for San Francisco, where they will sail for China and Japan.

Would the United States, perhaps, be drawn into the League through the conflict?

The Earl of Lytton smiled and announced he didn't desire to comment on American politics.

Would the League like to have this country as a member?

"The League, without your country, is like a bird with one wing."

Other commissioners in the party were Gen. Henri Claudel, Count Luigi Androvandi-Marescotti and Dr. Albert Herman Heinrich Schnee.

The party will proceed to the Vatican Palace and to the door of the Pope's library. The Premier first will be closeted alone with the Pope. SCIENCE LEAVES BABY TO FATE

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Medical science has made its last effort to save Diana Moore, 15 months old, from a life misery, and found it could do nothing.

A thorough examination of the child, whom at first it was hoped could be saved by an operation to enlarge the size of her skull, disclosed, surgeons said, that her case was of a type that cannot be cured surgically or medically.

The examinations, Dr. Iago Gladstone, executive secretary of the medical information bureau of the New York Academy of Medicine, said in a statement, showed Diana's mental development to be only that average for a child of four months.

The child is the daughter of Mrs. Lillian Moore, 20, whose husband left her, she said, because he was disappointed that the baby was a girl instead of a boy. Physicians at first estimated an operation had one chance in 1,000 of succeeding, and Mrs. Moore said she would take the chance.

TO SOFTEN prohibition's rigor and take allowances with a profit for human weakness, great foreign steamship lines have been organizing trips to nowhere in particular, but always outside the 12-mile prohibition limit.

For a reasonable price you could like the owl and the pussy cat that went to sea, sail away not for a year and a day exactly, but for a week or two.

Sometimes you went south where there are palm trees, sometimes north, but always a drinking bar, well provided, went along. And as in hotels before prohibition, the profit was in the bar. For many passengers it mattered little where the ship went, since they would not remember.

THE HEAD of the Shipping Board, R. K. Smith, of the Shipping Board, says these "nowhere" trips will no longer be permitted. Mr. Smith presumably believes that sailing from New York and back to New York, merely to take the air, is the same as coastwise traffic, forbidden to all but American ships.

The latter may organize "nowhere" trips, but they will be expected to respect the Constitution and drink water.

Kreisler Sponsors Girl Street Fiddler

DUBLIN, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—This is a story about Fritz Kreisler, as the Dublin Evening News tells it.

The great violinist was on his way home from a concert, and as he stepped into his car he heard a fiddle playing. In front of the theater he had just left, an Irish girl named Lillian Mack was playing for pennies.

Kreisler stood listening for several minutes, then he asked the girl to call at his hotel. She played for him there, and yesterday she signed a contract for a concert next week at the Theater Royal.

Man Wins Divorce On Desertion Charge

His bride wanted a larger apartment and a maid, and refused to live with him, although he procured a better apartment, Carl Anderson, 31, of 7315 McClure avenue, testified in Common Pleas Court. Judge Elder W. Marshall granted him a divorce from Dorothy E. Anderson, 22, of 306 Craft avenue, who contested the suit and denied deserting her husband.

McClure said she went to live with her mother after their elopement to Wellsburg, W. Va., September 1, 1926.

BARR DEFEATED ON LIGHT BID

The county electric light globe inquiry has ended with the award of the annual contract to the Doubleday-Hill Company.

Commissioner C. M. Barr's suggestion that the globes be etched "Stolen from Allegheny County" was not adopted. The matter has been under discussion two weeks. The award was held up last week until bidders could submit prices for etching the globes.

Controller Robert G. Woodside at yesterday's meeting declared he could not approve the award of a contract for etched globes because it was not in the original specifications. He said:

"I question whether the inferred theft of lamps by county employes would justify the expenditure of $400 additional for etching. That would buy a lot of lamps, about 3,500."

The contract was awarded the Doubleday-Hill Company, one of 11 concerns which quoted exactly the same price for globes: list price less 31 per cent on unbroken cases and 21 per cent on broken cases.

FINANCE HEADS SCORE RACKETS

The lure of hoarded gold has brought out a large number of off-color stock promotions, by which the racket seeks to take the cash away from the public, and these traps may only be avoided by careful investigation, George H. Dennison, head of the Pittsburgh Better Business Bureau told the regional meeting of the Pennsylvania Association of Personal Finance Companies following a noon meeting today at the William Penn Hotel.

Mr. Dennison

Many of the swindels are old ideas furbished up for the occasion, Dennison said.

Promoters are also taking advantage of the low market prices of stocks and bonds to offer to trade certificates in new companies for the known shares.

Charles H. Watts, of New York, will be toastmaster at a banquet this evening, and will introduce Edward Williams, Hugh Hoffman and the Rev. Dr. Carl W. Petty, of Pittsburgh.

Walter S. Herron, of Philadelphia, president of the association is directing the conference groups.

ESSAY CONTEST OPENS SUNDAY

Washington Address To Spur on Students

The Washington essay contest, open to students of all the schools in Western Pennsylvania and other youth as well, will begin Sunday with the publication of Washington's Farewell Address.

The address, illuminated and a full page, will appear in the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. It will furnish the basis for the essay contest, the subject of which, it is.

Being used as part of the courses in many schools, the contest will have the added stimulus of not only prizes, but the current celebration of the bi-centennial of the first President's birth date.

The prizes will include a gold cup and $100 for the winner in the top class; gold, silver and bronze medals and 500 diplomas.

William Randolph Hearst, who inspired the test, will award the prizes.

While the affair is nation-wide in scope, the prizes mentioned will include only the contestants whose themes appear in the Sun-Telegraph test. Other newspapers throughout the land will distribute prizes.

Many distinguished educators, authors and representative citizens will appear on the general judging board, while well-known professors in many localities will choose the best essays to come within their scope and turn them in for the final judgment.

The prizes and classifications follow:

1—Gold cup for the best essay (not to exceed 1,000 words in length) in any class by any person up to the age of 21 years. As an additional reward, the winner will receive a special prize of $100.

2—For the best essay (not to exceed 1,000 words in length) produced by any person between the age of 16 and 21, in or out of school or college, gold medal will be awarded; for the second best, silver medal; for the third best, bronze medal.

3—For the best essay (not to exceed 300 words in length) produced by any child in any high school, gold medal will be awarded; for the second best essay, silver medal; for the third best essay, a bronze medal.

4—For the best essay (not to exceed 400 words in length) produced by any child in junior high school, a gold medal will be awarded; for the second best essay, a silver medal; for the third best essay, bronze medal.

5—For the best essay (not to exceed 400 words in length) produced by any child in the grammar grades of school, a gold medal will be awarded; for the second best essay, a silver medal; for the third best essay, a bronze medal.

In each of the classes, 2, 3, 4 and 5 there will be awarded 100 diplomas of honorable mention for the 100 best essays produced in each class after the first, second and third prizes have been awarded.

The area included in this contest consists of Western Pennsylvania, some of Eastern Ohio and some of West Virginia.

Three Held in Death Of Homestead Girl

NORTH SIDE FIRE LAID TO BLAST

The third floor of a three-story brick building at 2016 Charles street, occupied by Carl Rshko, was damaged early today by fire, which, firemen were told, followed an explosion.

The Rshkos, who conduct a confectionery on the first floor, were visiting a relative in Central City. Wasil Yakarvitch, another relative, said to live in the building, could not be located.

Fred Bramer, of 2018 Charles street, told Battalion Chief Martin Loebig he was awakened by an explosion.

How One Woman Lost 10 Lbs. in a Week

Mrs. Betty Luedeke, of Dayton, writes: "I am using Kruschen to reduce weight—I lost 10 pounds in one week and cannot say too much to recommend it."

To take off fat easily, SAFELY and HARMLESSLY, take one-half teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water in the morning before breakfast—it is the safe way to lose unsightly fat and one bottle that lasts 4 weeks costs but a trifle. Get it at any drugstore in America. If this first bottle fails to convince you this is the safest way to lose fat—money back.

But be sure and get Kruschen Salts; imitations are numerous and you must safeguard your health.

COLDS

Science says that the cold germ is a dangerous ultravirus . . . gets deeply into the system and multiplies before it shows up in sneezing, coughing, headaches, congested areas and feverish conditions.

MUSIC — New York String Quartet — CARNEGIE MUSIC HALL

PROGRAM

Quartet in G Major, Op. 18, No. 2 ..... Beethoven
La Oracion del Torero..... Turina
Quartet, D Minor ..... Schubert

The Art Society presented the New York String Quartet in Carnegie Music Hall last night, Ottakar Cadek, first violin; Jaroslav Siskovsky, second violin; Ludvik Schwab, viola, and Milton Prinz, 'cello. Surely there is no doubt in the minds of that quartet that the audience was always favoring them, for in Pittsburgh it is almost unheard of to demand encores of chamber music ensembles, and we had four of these players.

Mr. Lissfelt

It is not surprising, however, for they make wonderful music. The program comprised an early work of Beethoven, the lovely "Death and the Maiden" Quartet of Schubert, of discreet length, and a novelty of Joaquin Turina, a contemporary Spanish composer, a pianist and teacher, who prefers to write chamber music and can make a tune that is not entirely taken from native dances.

The tone of this quartet is not large, although there was evidences of volume on occasion, but they aim for and attain a purity of intonation, a delicacy in rhythm, a repose and restraint in their emotional expression that is the acme in art.

As encores they played both the Minuet and the Clair de la Lune from Debussy's Suite Bergamasque (the latter a far better reading than most pianists are able to give it) and then two scenes from Moussorgsky's "Pictures at an Exposition"—"Gossiping and Quarreling," arranged from the original score by Pochon.

J. FRED LISSFELT.

$81,554,553 Alien Property Still Held

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—(INS.)—The Alien Property Custodian has on hand a residue of $81,554,553 of the property seized from alien enemies during the World War, Howard Sutherland has reported to Congress.

Sutherland said he had paid 1,840 claims during the past year and that 5,591 claims remained unpaid and unsettled. He said most of these were being held up by court suits and that "just when this litigation will end is uncertain."

State Lacks Funds For Butler Highway

State funds are not available for immediate improvement of Route No. 8, Pittsburgh to Butler, requested in a resolution passed several weeks ago by the Board of County Commissioners. A letter from Gov. Gifford Pinchot advising them to this effect was read at the meeting yesterday. He promised action on the project when funds are available.

COUNTY BEGINS ROAD JOB PLAN

The County Department of Highways is mapping a plan of road improvement on which laborers furnished through the Allegheny County Relief Association will be used.

At the Commissioners' meeting yesterday the department was instructed to begin immediately a survey for a program of road improvement that will distribute the work over the entire county, particularly in districts where unemployment is acute.

Boroughs, townships and second-class cities in which road work will be done will be required to furnish material. The Commissioners will provide the wages from the $500,000 which they pledged to make available for the Relief Association. The necessary money will be transferred from the road bond account to the road tax fund.

NEW BULBS AID CAMERAMEN

Gone are the days when a photographer had to carry a complete studio with him to make a picture; now all he needs is his camera and two 60-watt electric light bulbs, Charles D. Kaufmann, of Chicago, told the 1932 convention of the Triangle Photographers' Association yesterday in the Keystone Athletic Club.

Kaufmann said:

"It won't be long before we'll be making pictures in the dark. And the whole secret is the newly developed 'fast' film called panchromatic film, which records a picture in a split second, needing little or no light."

Other speakers included Ray Collegrove and Herbert G. Stokes, Cleveland; George Barnum, Cincinnati, and James C. Mace.

Benson Elected By Travelers' Aid

George E. Benson was elected president of the Travelers' Aid Society at the eleventh annual meeting of the board of directors. Mrs. William N. Frew and Philip H. Lantz were named vice presidents, Miss Eleanor D. Gillespie and Miss Fredericka F. Hays, secretary and executive secretary respectively, and Malcolm McGriffin, treasurer. A report of the activities for last year said 9,815 persons were assisted.

One Studio Is Now Rushing Melodrama Based on War-Torn China

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright 1932 by King Features Syndicate)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 10.

More than ever before, the movie-makers of Hollywood are watching the headlines in the daily papers. Dramatic news stories promptly find their way into celluloid.

David Selznick, for instance, has started all the wheels turning at R-K-O to rush into production with "The Roar of the Dragons," a melodrama based on war-torn China. Howard Estabrook, ace scenarist of the company, is adapting the story from an original by Merian C. Cooper.

This picture will supersede "The March of a Nation" on R-K-O's schedule, with Richard Dix and Irene Dunne stepping into the new production. Several players who worked with them in "Cimarron" also are scheduled for parts.

William Le Baron will produce "The Roar of the Dragons" for R-K-O.

GARBO HUMOR

Believe it or not, as Mr. Ripley would say, Greta Garbo has pulled a gag on herself.

The other day in "Grand Hotel" she was supposed to walk through a crowd of admirers in a lobby.

"Now, Miss Garbo," explained Director Goulding, "all you want is to get rid of these people. You go through them like a frightened deer pursued by hounds."

La Garbo inclined her head.

"Now," said Goulding, "do you want to rehearse this scene?"

A faint smile curved the Garbo lips.

"No," she replied, "I rehearsed it in New York."

No day is complete without a new Marx Brothers prank. This morning the frantic four paraded into Mike Levee's office in the middle of a conference, barred the door and sang . . . Ann Harding and Harry Bannister have bought a new plane, their second. It's an open job . . . Dick Arlen tells me his golf game is back to 76, but that my story caused all his friends to take him . . . C. Graham Baker, one of Hollywood's better scenarists, is in the hospital, also Edgar Selwyn . . . Here's a record of some sort. John Blystone is directing his fifty-fifth picture for Fox . . . Saw Douglas Fairbanks today, driving golf balls between the studio office building and a nearby stage. He sliced a ball through the window of the Sam Goldwyn unit and dozens of heads popped out. Doug laughed, waved and went on with his sport.

DARE-DEVIL PASSES

Lee Nomis, one of Hollywood's most famous stunt men, is dead. He met his end while cameras were grinding on what was supposed to be a comedy air stunt. It was many times less dangerous than other feats he had survived. As far back as 1922, Lee staged the spectacular automobile-motorcycle crash in "Manslaughter." You remember?—where Leatrice Joy drove her car into the traffic officer. Since then, he had braved hundreds of dangers. But fate caught up with him at last. The dwindling ranks of Hollywood stunt men mourn a fellow spirit and, perhaps, look grimly into the future.

Corinne Griffith, Ray Plan Come-Back

Advices from London are that Corinne Griffith soon will stage a come-back at the Elstree studios there. At the same time it is reported that Charles Ray, who has been improving his voice for the past year in New York, is about ready for his screen return.

'The City' Is Presented At I. K. S.

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Clyde Fitch's drama, "The City," was presented in the Irene Kaufmann Settlement theater last night by a group of young people under the direction of Louis Isaacs. It was an ambitious effort, and the actors acquitted themselves well.

"The City" was Clyde Fitch's last play, not produced until several months after his death. He had written plays that had earned him a million dollars by lying about life. He had made that poor old lady, Barbara Frietchie, into a beautiful young girl for Julia Marlowe. But in this last play he suddenly turned to realism, and soft-hearted people ranted and raved about it. Why he had even put a dope-fiend into this play, acted by Tully Marshall, once a Pittsburgh stock actor, in a way that made his fame!

Today "The City" seems tame and almost romantically sweet. It is true there is that grueling second act, in which the opposing forces have a marathon debate while waiting for the tardy police, but in the third act everybody reforms and moralizes beautifully and "won't never do it again."

The I. K. S. Players made the most of their opportunities. Especially good work was done by Mildred Baringoltz as Tess, and Hyman Small as Van Vranken, while Milton Frankel put the force of sincerity and careful work into the dope-fiend. Harry Ziff, Sylvia Bernstein, Hannah Goldring, Milton Berlin, Isadore Rosenberg and Eleanor Frank had the other important roles and acquitted themselves well, while the production was very creditable.

Amateur Critics Enter Review Contest

More than 1,000 amateur critics have sent in reviews in the contest sponsored by the Stanley and Warner theaters. The first prize winner will have his choice of a 40-day cruise through the Mediterranean with all expenses paid or a trip to California via the Panama Canal. The judging will be by the three photoplay editors of the Pittsburgh daily newspapers. Anyone can enter the contest by writing a 200-word review of any show in the Warner or Stanley, and mail it to the Review Editor, 209 Clark Building.

Royal Ubangi Pay Town A Visit

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

Members of the royal household of Ubangi have encamped in Motor Square Garden. They are our town's latest and biggest curiosity.

The women, eight in all, have lips as big as saucers, that poke out at you like the beak of a duck. They are the pride and the joy of the African Congo.

One of them is Queen Kolio-lo. She's 60 if she's a day. But she smokes a pipe with the nonchalance of a cowboy in a tobacco advertisement.

The other women all princesses we presume, appear much younger. But none of them are debutantes. They, too, smoke pipes. Their eyes are alert with jungle traditions. They wear grass skirts. Their heads are bare and their hair is short and kinky. Empress Eugenie means nothing to the Congo.

A man is present. And what a man! He's the king. He struts about in a red bathrobe and keeps an alert eye on the ladies. On his head is a Turkish fez.

Inspired, we ask him what he thinks of Pittsburgh. His answer is a gutteral noise that sounds like the Amos-and-Andy distress signal. We ask him no more questions.

Three or four replicas of Congo huts are setting around. Perhaps they keep the Ubangi globe-trotters from getting homesick. Interpreters move about, answering questions. In a little while, the natives will dance and cook their dinner.

Yes, they'll stay in Pittsburgh for some time—until February 20, a man in a white helmet announces.

It must have been a good day. The king puts his corncob pipe into the folds of his robe and sticks a fat, black cigar in his mouth.

Mother's Advice to Daughter Draws Disapproval

Would you want your little girl to sow her wild oats before she married?

Revolting idea, isn't it? But that was exactly what Claudette wanted her little girl to do. She herself had sowed 'em, and she advocated them for all young girls, and backed it up with a serious argument.

"Girls who have traveled the Whoopee Trail make better wives than those who have stayed in the chimney corner," said she. "They know what it's all about . . . and they've gotten a lot of foolishness and dangerous curiosity out of their systems. They'll be more content to settle down than the girl who has never had a taste of life. And they will be better able to pick the right husband, for they will know how to pick the real from the false."

Yes? We had our doubts. But we believed in playing fair and giving every side a chance. So we printed Claudette's letter, wondering how many would agree with her. And here comes Eve, with her slant on the subject.

"Dear Sally—

"That was a very foolish letter, according to my opinion, that Claudette wrote about 'sowing wild oats.' One that could do a lot of harm amongst the younger generation. I hope none of them take it seriously.

"I can understand a girl who has made a misstep . . . but not one who says that she did it deliberately . . . or who declares that she had fun doing it. And who advises others to do the same, even her own daughter! I can't get her at all!

UNNECESSARY CHANCES

"I sowed no wild oats myself. Neither did my husband, thank goodness! But we had a good time, both of us, and enjoyed life immensely. And we're both happy and contented now.

"My daughter lived a clean life, too, and is happily married to a man who did likewise. My boy is only 17, but I am trying to teach him that it is not necessary to 'sow wild oats' to get fun out of life.

"I am glad, of course, if she is happy. If she is, she is probably the one exception out of a hundred who found misery and grief on the Whoopee Road. And she shouldn't be so reckless in her advice to other people. She is advising them to take dreadful chances that may wreck their lives.

DANGEROUS ADVICE

"We all ought to know by this time that we can have a good time without going in for such stuff as 'wild oats.' And we can learn about living without it, too. Please don't give your daughter such dangerous advice, Claudette. EVE."

Right you are, Eve.

People who sow wild oats do take dreadful chances—and only a fool will deny it.

And as for wishing one's own little girl to tread the Whoopee Trail . . . there's something mighty wrong in a "mother love" that could even contemplate the thought. A female wild cat, fighting for her brood against every danger, makes a better mother than that.

So you can take it straight from me, Mistress Claudette—you may consider yourself smart with your "advanced modern views" and your circle of burnt-out old has-beens may likewise applaud them. But personally, I think you're a rotter!

So that's that. And if you never write again to this column—it will be just too soon!

Few Persons Are Good at Being Their Own Bosses, Declares Fay King

SO RELIABLE AND TIRELESS WHEN WORKING FOR A STRICT BOSS, BUT CAN'T DRIVE HIMSELF AT ALL
NOW THAT I'M MY OWN BOSS IN MY OWN HOME I DON'T ACCOMPLISH HALF AS MUCH AS I DID AT THE OFFICE!
VERY FEW WILL WORK AS HARD FOR THEMSELVES AS FOR OTHERS
FAY KING

By FAY KING

There are countless persons who are excellent workers if they have a good boss standing by to drive them on.

But few of us are good at being our own bosses.

We can accomplish most anything if we know that we must and are accountable to someone else, but when it comes to driving ourselves onward and making good on our own we make rather a mess of it.

Yet that one who can make his own rules and live up to them and let nothing and no one interfere with the tasks he has set himself to accomplish is a remarkable person indeed.

No one can be independent of duty in this world, but they can be independent of interference in their purpose, which is much!

Madge Promises Final Script Within Eight Days

I had my answer ready for Philip Veritzen's query almost before he had asked it.

"I can give you the revised act tomorrow morning at eleven o'clock," I said. "Will that do?"

"Admirably," he said. "I am sure you will be able to change the role so that it will be one of the strongest in the play. I am not going to suggest anything to you except the advisability of using a stiletto instead of a pickaxe when you work on him."

His mirthful smile, his brilliant eyes, pointed the gibing suggestion and I flushed under his scrutiny.

"I'll do my best," I said quietly.

"I know you will," he replied, indulgently. "Remember, you won't have to touch anything except that role of Vickers. Any minor revisions—and they will be few—we can manage when the play is completed. When will that be?"

He shot the last question at me as if it had been an actual missile from a revolver and his eyes held an expression that told me he expected me to name a brief period of time.

I managed, however, to keep myself from being intimidated at that mandatory look, for I remembered this fourth act, unlike the third, had not been promised in short order. Lil had given him the impression that the third act was finished and we both had been compelled to work all night in order to make good her statement, but he understood that the fourth act had not yet been begun and I knew I need not make the completion of it a matter of hours as the third had been.

"I can have it for you in two weeks," I said tentatively.

Mr. Veritzen flung his hands wildly in the air.

"Two weeks!" he exclaimed. You might as well say two years! I must have it in eight days at the outside!

"You shall have it," I said, in a voice I hardly recognized as my own, so panic stricken was I at the demand and yet so determined not to fail him.

Fate had been so good to me, I reflected, in giving me so unusual an approval of my work from the greatest dramatic authority in the country, that I felt armed for any effort, no matter how strenuous.

"That's the spirit which moves mountains," Mr. Veritzen said, and there was a genuine approval in his voice that did much to quell my panic at the prospect of trying to finish my play in eight days. After all, I reflected, I had the general plan of my final act in mind, and if I could manage to have my time undisturbed, I should be able to complete the task.

"If!" I felt inclined to sigh with Hamlet, "Ay, there's the rub!" Where in the farmhouse could I hope to find the seclusion necessary for anything so important as the writing of the finale to my play? I could not hope to repeat again the strenuous performance of the preceding night, when from a rough draft of my third act, and fortified by the support of Lillian and Katherine, as well as by much black coffee, I had dictated the act in its entirety to Lillian. That was a stunt which could be done only once. It would not bear repetition—indeed it would fall flat if tried again before many months—even years.

But some way, somehow—I set my teeth as I made the vow—the pledge I had made Philip Veritzen should be kept. The play should be finished at the end of the eight days he had named. Without realizing what I was doing I struck my doubled-up right hand into the palm of my left one.

Mr. Veritzen laughed outright.

"You are in earnest, aren't you?" he said. "I shall come back at the end of the eighth day with the expectation of reading the play in its entirety. Tomorrow I shall check up on your revised third act. If it is as satisfactory as were the first two, I shall not trouble you again until the eighth day that I have named. Please arrange, at my expense after I have approved the revised third act, to have three letter perfect copies of the first three acts and engage the same typist to do the last act when I shall have read and approved it. Then we can go directly at the final revision."

He settled back in his chair—he had been leaning forward as he talked—and smiled genially.

"Enough of work for awhile," he said. "Tell me about yourself. I need not ask if you are deliriously happy, I suppose, with your tiny new daughter."

I answered the upward inflection in his voice with emphasis.

"Delirious is exactly the word," I said. "She is such a marvelous baby!"

"When may I see her?" he asked. "Or is that a privilege too exalted for a mere professional associate?"

"Perhaps," I smiled, "but not for a friend of the family. Unfortunately, however, she is asleep just now, and the old laws of the Medes and Persians are trifles compared to Mrs. Bickett's rules."

"Some other time then," he said easily. "I shall claim my privilege. Tell me something else. What do you think of Avis Arlen?"

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Bad Eating Habits Often Lead to Serious Trouble

About 10 per cent of the population suffer from ulcer of the stomach or intestines. It occurs in middle life, more commonly in women.

It is associated with bad eating habits and general lack of resistance. Infected tonsils, diseased teeth and other pus conditions are factors. It is found in persons whose occupations and working hours force them to observe irregular hours.

Dr. Copeland

For many years "peptic ulcer," as the doctors call it, was believed to be strictly a disease of the stomach. It is now known to be one of the signs of a constitutional disturbance. Increase in the acid content of the stomach is an important factor in its development.

But the condition results not from one thing, but from a combination of many things. For years its victim complains of pain and discomfort, but never makes any serious effort to correct the condition. By taking bicarbonate of soda, or a similar drug, the pain is relieved. Because of this temporary relief, no thorough measures are applied. Unfortunately this neglect often leads to surgery as the only means of cure.

As a rule, there is pain after meals. The pain is severe, burning in its nature, and is located just below the stomach. The eating of food, as well as the taking of alkaline medicine, usually relieves the pain.

Instead of severe pain there may be attacks of discomfort after meals. There may be a sense of fullness, or the burning sensation with acid belchings.

These symptoms are likely to appear from two to four hours after the meal. Another sign of this condition is a distinct hunger pain, felt about 2 o'clock in the morning.

When the condition is recognized early it can be cured by medication and diet. In the more severe forms, where there has been marked stomach disturbance over a long period, with acute agonizing pain, more heroic measures are necessary. They are needed to stop the pain, which is so intense as to cause the patient to toss from side to side, with difficulty in breathing. Such a patient is sick indeed.

Since peptic ulcers are sometimes caused by infection in the body, it is important that the central focus be found. If there are diseased tonsils, they should be removed. The teeth should be carefully examined and given proper attention.

The patient is placed on a diet abundant in carbohydrates and fluids. It may include eggs and fish. It is better to have smaller and more frequent meals, perhaps five a day. The meals may be made of soups, fish, mashed potatoes, buttered toast, custard and other light food.

All fried and greasy foods should be avoided, as well as salt, pepper, spices and other condiments. Tobacco and alcohol should not be used.

Household Hints

If you only have a few flowers in the vase and they look a bit straggly, put a few corks in the water. They will hold up the flowers and keep them in place without making them look stiff.

A bowl of fruit is very decorative in the dining-room, but unless eaten rapidly it will soon decay. Perhaps it is wise, if you are not big fruit eaters, to keep the fruit in the cool pantry and use some other form of decoration.

The housewife who has a new electric refrigerator will find that an uncooked roast left in the box for any length of time will require about 10 or 15 minutes' extra time in the cooking. It is so cold when it is put into the oven that the extra time is required to get that coldness out before the cooking actually starts.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Wedding Invitation

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Recently a friend of mine was married and instead of them sending printed invitations, the bride's mother called in person to invite the guests. Is this proper?

2. The bride also wore a hat at an 8 o'clock wedding, evening? Is this also correct?

PAT.

1. Yes, this was a very delightful and gracious way of extending the invitations to the wedding. Apparently the wedding was a small, simple informal one, and for the hostess to go in person and invite her guests was in excellent form.

2. This is sometimes done. Whether or not it was in the best of form depends on the other plans for the wedding and the costumes.

The Fiance and the Shower

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Please advise whether or not it is correct for the groom to be present at a shower given in honor of the bride? A says he is not to be present and B thinks he should come with the bride.

BETTY.

Usually a shower is not considered an appropriate party for the fiance to attend, since it is customarily planned to be a "girl party." But sometimes the hostess, if, say, her party is an afternoon bridge party, plans to have some of the men friends of the girls drop in after business hours, and then, of course, the fiance is invited, too. But I shouldn't think that he would like to attend the party if he is to be the only man.

Announcements

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband and I expect a baby soon. We have been wondering if it would be correct to send the little announcements to his men friends, whom he doesn't see very often, or should they find out about it indirectly? We are sending them to all our married friends.

J. S.

It would be friendly, and correct, to send these announcements to your husband's friends.

CAPONE'S PLEA BEFORE COURT

CHICAGO, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—The appeal of "Scarface Al" Capone from his conviction for income tax evasion has been taken under advisement by the United States Court of Appeals. For three hours yesterday the court heard arguments of the Capone counsel attacking the validity of the indictment.

The attorneys held the indictment failed to specify overt acts and for this reason made it possible for the government to try Capone again, if it chose, on the same offense. Not once was the gangster's name mentioned during the proceedings. He was referred to as "the defendant."

Meantime Capone remained in the county jail, where he has been staying since October 24 without credit on his 11-year sentence.

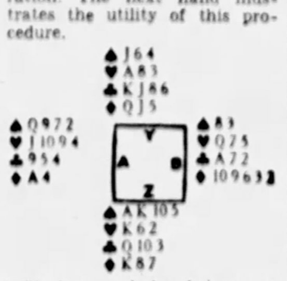
Contract Bridge -:-

OFFICIAL SYSTEM As Adopted by Leading Authorities

By E. V. SHEPARD

Show All You Have to Partner

Never keep partner in the dark. When it is possible to do so, show him all that you have. Let him choose the final declaration. The next hand illustrates the utility of this procedure.



Having a choice between a spade make and no-trumps, Z first showed his suit, by bidding 1-Spade. Having only three spades, Y should have shifted to no-trumps, but instead of this he bid 2-Spades. Z promptly overcalled with 2-No Trumps, to allow Y to decide upon the final make. This Y did by bidding 3-No Trumps.

To determine which is the better final make—spades or no-trumps—we will review about what must happen at each of these declarations. Against spades the opening lead will be the J of hearts. Dummy's A will win the trick, and a low spade will be led towards the declarer (lacking the 9 there is no use in leading dummy's J). The finesse of Z's 10 will lose to A's queen. Another heart will be led; Z's K will win the trick and trumps will be pulled without loss. Z next will lead a club, to clear that suit, and B will win the trick. If Z won the third heart lead, A will be put in the lead with his ace of diamonds. In case Z won the second heart lead, B still will have a heart to lead to his partner, and A must win two heart tricks. These two tricks plus their two side aces will enable A-B to defeat a game contract at spades.

Against no-trumps A will make the same opening lead of his J of hearts. Suppose that dummy's A wins the trick, as it did in the case of the spade declaration. To avoid the blocking of his partner's suit, B should either play his 7, preparatory to unblocking his Q, or, better still, drop his Q under dummy's A. B can tell that the missing deuce is held by the declarer; he knows well that the ace never would be played out of dummy on the first round unless Z held the twice-guarded K. The declarer also knows that A has led a suit of only four cards (unless he has led his fifth best heart), as both cards lower than the one led are visible in the hands of the declaring side.

Counting his visible tricks, the declarer sees two spades (without taking a finesse), two hearts, two diamonds and three clubs; nine certain tricks by giving opponents their two aces and two hearts.

No player having his wits about him can miss game at no-trumps. Having won the first tricks, a low club must be led from dummy. B will play low to afford his partner a possible opportunity to win a cheap trick, but B will win the second club trick and lay down his top heart. Z will win the third round of hearts and clear his diamonds. A will win the second round of diamonds and take his one heart trick. That leaves all remaining tricks for the declarer to gather in. As frequently happens when the declarer holds only four trumps, no-trumps and spades can win the same number of tricks, yielding game at no-trumps.

METAL UNION ACCEPTS CUT

The Sheet Metal Workers' Union has accepted a wage cut of $2 a day, dropping the daily rate from $12.50 to $10.50, effective at once. The union is the second of building trades workers to accept a wage cut since the Building Trades Employers' Association ordered a 25 per cent reduction effective February 1. A $2-a-day cut was accepted by the Carpenters' and Joiners' Union last week, cutting the daily wage to $10.

E. H. Reismeyer, representing the sheet metal contractors, and W. H. Lyons, business agent for the Sheet Metal Workers' Union, drew up the new wage scale contract, it was said.

Negotiations will be continued with individual unions connected with the Pittsburgh Building Trades Council, including a few unaffiliated groups, according to F. O. Reed, secretary of the Building Trades Employers' Association.

Fifty and Fit

A MAN is as old—or as young—as his organs.

At fifty, you can be in your prime.

Why go along with "fairly good health" when you might be enjoying vigor you haven't felt for years?

There's a simple little thing anyone can do to keep the vital organs stimulated, and feel fit all the time. People don't realize how sluggish they've grown until they've tried it. The stimulant that will stir your system to new life is Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin. It will make a most amazing difference in many ways.

This famous doctor's prescription is a delicious syrup made with fresh herbs, active senna, and pure pepsin. It starts its good work with the first spoonful. That's all you need to drive away the dullness and headache of a bilious spell, and rid the system of that slow poison that saps your strength. It's better than a tonic for tired bowels, and unlike habit-forming laxatives you can take it freely or give it to any child. And it isn't expensive.

Get some syrup pepsin today, and take a little tonight. Don't wait until you're sick to give your system this wonderful help. You can avoid those spells of biliousness or constipation. A spoonful every now and then is better than constant worry about the condition of your bowels, or fear of auto-intoxication as you grow older. Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin protects the system. All druggists keep this preparation.

John Joseph Lapsansky, 37, of 3706 Bates street, engineer of buildings and grounds at the University of Pittsburgh, asked permission to change his surname to Lapp, by which he said he has been known for years, in a petition in Common Pleas Court. MOTHER—Watch this Girl... This is the Time You Should be on Your Guard

"My back bothers me," she quietly complains... "I guess I'll lie down." Have you ever felt this way yourself?

Despondent, Listless Girls

SHE LOOKS despondent, worn-out and depressed. Young girls budding into womanhood often get quiet and wistful. Lassitude overtakes them. They should be watched!

"I have a headache," they quietly complain. "My back bothers me... I guess I'll lie down."

These are the symptoms, mother. And you should be on your guard.

During this "trying time" every young girl needs the helpful benefit of a strengthening medicine like Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Neglect now only invites suffering and unhappiness later on. Pain destroys beauty. Worry ruins the disposition.

That's why so many attractive young women become faded prematurely. The pretty girl of 18 becomes a languid lady at 25.

Suffering isn't natural. Remember that. It may be brave and heroic ... but it's unnecessary.

When your daughter becomes tired and listless... won't you give her Vegetable Compound Tablets ... just as other mothers do? For over fifty years this medicine has been considered a SAFE and ACCEPTED household remedy.

The very fact that it's been in use a long, long time, gives women extra confidence. They know it must be good ... or so many women wouldn't take it.

And how true that is! For our records show that 98 out of every 100 women who write us actually report benefit from the strengthening treatment of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of either the tablets or the liquid. Don't postpone for another day the blessed relief this medicine brings.

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

In Mayfair —With— Patricia Pitt

As you know, the drama committee of the Twentieth Century Club gave its annual Mardi Gras last night in the club, and a very gala affair it was. The guests favored the costumes of the "gay 90's," but there were Turks, too, and plumbers and raggedy Annes and bellhops and just about everything. Mrs. George Harwood looked quite regal in a gold cloth and white satin Turkish costume with a white satin turban surmounted by a tall white plume. Mrs. A. P. Brill was another in black satin with a black satin turban and white plume.

Elizabeth Jenkins was perhaps the most unusual being radio with a gown of pale blue satin and a wide circular blue tulle headdress reminiscent of a glorified loud-speaker with long silver tassels falling from the ends of the dis. Janet Hardie was a petite bellboy in blue satin with a perky cap. Mrs. C. B. Monroe was a demure belle with long curls locked over one shoulder and a gown of pink net. Mrs. Frederic Ickes Merrick as Queen Mary wore lavender taffeta and a tiny black hat covered with a profusion of deep red roses.

Mrs. James P. Cassidy and Mrs. George D. Macbeth were well-behaved youngsters in short daintily-sprigged dimity frocks and curls. Mrs. Kirkland W. Todd was reminiscent of an old-fashioned lace valentine with a frilled pink muslin frock, ruffled white pantalettes and a white sun-bonnet and she carried a small nosegay.

And there were several who were wearing their mothers' silk and lace wedding gowns, with trailing skirts and bustles and off-the-shoulder fichus. And a word about the dinner table, which was a huge hollow double square, lighted by tall ivory tapers. The table was decorated simply in white and crystal.

ANALYZE THE RENTAL CHECK

If one not living at Schenley Apartments happened to be familiar with the Schenley service system, and attempted, by means of numerous paid arrangements, to duplicate it, the extra expenditures would bring the monthly outlay to a prohibitive figure.

Even then, the effort to match Schenley service would result in but a feeble imitation. To achieve such results it would be necessary to reproduce the physical plant which, aside from the specific apartment service employing 125 attendants, includes also the Hotel Schenley service facilities and the various Schenley shops.

Schenley residents enjoy a service on a par with and of a wider scope than the highest type hotel service obtainable anywhere. That this service makes possible many important economies to the individual tenant is due to the co-operative benefits of system.

If you are considering a change of residence this Spring, or if you desire an economical change without sacrifice of living standards, you cannot afford to neglect inspecting our rental availabilities and interviewing our rental agents, who are on the premises. MARKED DIFFERENCE BETWEEN TOWN AND COUNTRY CLOTHES

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Feb. 10.—Town and country clothes are totally different, no matter how much a saleswoman lauds the merits of a garment as being suitable for either place. For the country suit has a casual air and the town frock, proper, is the essence of smart sophistication, no matter how simple it may appear. For simplicity and a casual look are two totally different things, although the same amount of sartorial sense to create them. Study these different attributes of the mode carefully and you will find yourself going definitely after a certain type of garment for a certain purpose without any floundering and without any necessity for explanations by the saleswoman. This clothes sense can be cultivated by almost anybody. As we have frequently pointed out, it has nothing to do with money. It is not dictated, harrowed or fostered, by the circle in which one moves. It is a definite sense that nearly always has been cultivated by the woman who sets out to make the best of herself regardless of the amount of money she can use for that purpose. It is usually, because of a restricted budget, that a woman learns to buy superbly, picking out every item carefully and with a real need and purpose in mind, and choosing frocks that are not dated and so can be worn again and again.

* * *

THE SKETCHES displayed today have been selected to show you the difference that exists in the casual country suit and the apparently simple, casual town frock. The frock is from Worth's new collection and is typical of the more formal models for afternoon wear as created by this pre-eminent house. It is of very heavy black crepe de chine and is relieved by the addition of a daintily smocked and hemstitched vest of white crepe georgette. The deep bib-shaped collar is cut in three wide scallops, the central one of which is attached to the bodice, leaving the two sides free. Circular flouncing on the sleeves and the sides and back of the skirt "dress-up" this frock to a quite sophisticated degree.

* * *

THE COUNTRY COSTUME is from Molyneux's Riviera collection. Fine flannel-jersey makes this sport frock and jacket in regular flannel-gray. The jacket is cut in straight box lines with a wide, deep collar and even wider lapels. A vivid orange crepe de chine scarf dotted in white gives a gay color accent to the tailored frock. An inverted pleat in front of the skirt breaks the straight silhouette.

Women said:

YOU CAN'T KEEP SUDS LIKE THAT

BUT that was before they used the New Oxydol

● Maybe you've had this experience; most women have. You stir up suds in dishpan or laundry tub, only to see them ball up or fade away when you put in greasy dishes or dirty clothes.

But that doesn't happen with the New Oxydol. Sprinkle this soap in and see the amazing result. Rich—fluffy—permanent suds. Suds that soak the dirt out and keep it out—suds that don't collapse, letting the dirt fall back on the clothes. Suds that soak clothes gleaming white—that make dishes sparkling clean—that leave no scum.

Oxydol makes 50% more suds—that's why this safe, clean-smelling soap can do so much, even in the hardest water—and all water hardens when you put in dirty clothes or greasy dishes. Try the New Oxydol. You'll bless the day you learned its name.

COLDS are expensive!

Avoid risk of self-infection by using KLEENEX disposable TISSUES instead of handkerchiefs

COLDS are costly, both in health and money. They are the starting point for a whole list of serious and expensive illnesses. Colds cause more time lost from business, more absences from office and school, than any other disease.

* It is good sense and good business to take every precaution at the first sign of a cold in yourself or your family.

Start using Kleenex at once

Stop using handkerchiefs when the first sniffle starts! Handkerchiefs collect germs—cause constant self-infection.

The only safe handkerchief is one you can use and then destroy at once—Kleenex disposable tissues.

Imagine a soft, gentle, super-absorbent tissue instead of a damp, unsightly handkerchief! Think of the relief—no handkerchief washing to do or to pay for!

Many uses for Kleenex

You'll find many other uses for Kleenex. Use it to wipe razor blades; as bandages for minor wounds; for polishing spectacles.

That big supply of Kleenex that formerly cost 50 cents, is now priced regularly at 35 cents! Buy several boxes of Kleenex at this new low price. Sold at all drug, dry goods or department stores.

LISTENING IN—With the Radio Editor

IN COLORFUL CHINESE costume, Mrs. William H. Yot, of Dormont, sat before a microphone in the editorial offices of the Sun-Telegraph last night and told listeners of WCAE how to pronounce the names appearing most frequently in the war news from the Shanghai battlefront.

Mrs. Yot spoke on the Globe-Trotter period of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News and was interviewed by Louis L. Kaufman. And as a result of her talk, readers of the Sun-Telegraph today can pronounce with impunity such tongue-twisters as Whangpoo, Hongkew, Chapei, Paoshan, Woosung, Kiangwan and Shilungkow.

Mrs. Yot, who was born in Philadelphia, went to China as a little girl and lived for many years at Canton. Speaking in a cultured, well-modulated voice, she explained that there are three principal dialects in the Chinese tongue, the Cantonese, or Southern; the Shanghai, or central, and the Mandarin, or northern. In addition, there are 18 to 20 others, all different, but yet based upon the same printed characters.

Mrs. Yot does not expect the "war" to last long, for regardless of the naval bombardments, artillery duels and machine-gun attacks, she explains:

"Japan cannot withstand the terrific financial loss as a result of the Chinese boycott. In the final analysis, it is business, and not bullets, which will end the fighting."

Tonight's Highlights

HELEN BOARD, guest soprano on the Personalities period, WJAS at 10, promises a delightful program, including the ever-popular "L'Amour, Toujours l'Amour."

At the same hour, on WCAE, baseball followers are reminded that the spring training season is near at hand as Grantland Rice interviews John Heydler, president of the National League.

All the way from Geneva, where the disarmament conference is now in progress, comes another program tonight to WJAS at 6. Sir John Simon, leader of the British delegation, will be the speaker.

The Haydn String Trio at 7:30, and Don Shoup's Orchestra, with Dick Ware, at 9:30, are outstanding on the evening's offerings by KQV.

Otherwise, set your dials for Elsie Janis on the "Believe It or Not" program, KDKA at 7:45; Sousa's Band with the Revelers, WCAE at 8:30, and Sherlock Holmes, KDKA, at 9.

THE SHANGHAI WAR news has brought out the fact that the wife of Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek, of "I am prepared to die for China" fame, was a classmate at Wellesley of Leonard Joys' wife.

Quite appropriately, the largest club—the Kate Smith Club—is now being formed by the Smith Association of the World.

The story of the Secret Service in action in the World War will be dramatized for the radio. The first story, dealing with the saving of the Leviathan from a submarine as it carried 10,000 doughboys to France, will be on the WJZ-NBC network Sunday.

Sisters of the Skillet begin a long vaudeville engagement Saturday. . . . Paul Whiteman is now a Kentucky Colonel. . . . Sallie Belle Cox, "Junior" in the "Raising Junior" series, is radio's professional cry-baby, weeping into a small blue pillow, . . . Nearly 3,000 prisoners at Leavenworth are "Myrt and Marge" addicts.

It's possible, but hardly probable, that Pittsburgh will see Morton Downey and Tony Wons in person in the near future. The entire Quarter-Hour goes on an extensive vaudeville tour, starting February 19. Eight weeks of stage appearances already are definitely arranged. This will be the first time a sponsored radio program has been taken intact on such a tour.

WHOLESALE FORGERY CHARGED IN VOTE TRIAL

POLITICS

Convention to Block McFadden Nomination

By MARK SHIELDS

Mark Shields

Circulation in North Dakota of petitions for Representative Louis T. McFadden, of Pennsylvania, as a candidate for the presidency should not arouse any expectations anywhere that the anti-Hoover member from the Fifteenth District will get the Republican nomination at Chicago.

Casting aside entirely any question of ability, the cold logic of politics is against McFadden. Even a stampeded convention could not be turned to his advantage, and stampedes in convention are affairs of dim and distant memory.

In the remote circumstance that the Republicans should turn to another man than Mr. Hoover, that the patronage of the Postoffice Department and the prestige of the presidency are insufficient to block any other aspirant — they have been sufficient under conditions more adverse than those facing Mr. Hoover—it would hardly be Mr. McFadden.

His appeal to the country would be along the line of nationalism through his attacks upon international bankers and the President for activity in foreign affairs. That is an extremely popular platform, and would win many votes, but the first hurdle is the convention, and that will be in the hands of Republican leaders who will not permit the nomination of McFadden.

Remarkable Reticence By County Candidates

There is a remarkable reticence among Allegheny County congressional and legislative candidates about their plans for the primary campaign, the first stages of which already are upon the state.

Not one of the five Allegheny County Congressmen has announced his candidacy, though it is assumed all the quintet of incumbents will seek a return to Washington.

Among the state Senatorial candidates it is considered a foregone conclusion that Senators Frank J. Harris and James J. Coyne will run again. The announcement of Harris may come at any time.

* * *

Rooney, North Side, Avowed Candidate

Representative James Rooney, of the North Side, is an avowed candidate, but official announcements are notable for their absence.

Some observers believe that within the city the lack of activity on the part of legislative candidates can be attributed to the upset state of the city organization, with its head, Mayor Charles H. Kline, slated to go on trial next month for alleged misconduct in office. However, the last day for filing nominating papers is March 7, a week before the Mayor is scheduled to face the court at Butler, so there must be decisions before the outcome of that case is determined.

But much does depend on the shifting sands of political alliances, which are not as firmly anchored as they were before the administration ran into squalls.

Commissioner Barr's Heat Not Surprising

The heat of County Commissioner Barr over the awkward questionnaire Director John W. Vickerman, of the Bureau of Elections asked his subordinates to sign is not surprising. Vickerman was appointed through Barr's influence, and it is mortifying to see one of your appointees asking job-holders to disclose the "organizations" to which they belong. Barr said he knew nothing of the questionnaire, that it was unnecessary, and his repudiation of it was sincere.

But the Commissioner went a bit too far when he observed that only heads of departments should be permitted to talk to newspapermen, that Commissioner McGovern, the chairman, should do all the talking for the Commissioners, and that he "would fire any man who gave out any information about the county's business unless he was authorized to do so."

* * *

Right of Public To Information Upheld

I merely offer this observation on this subject:

If the principle laid down by Commissioner Barr had been adhered to with fidelity during the past few years county employes, dissatisfied with conditions they encountered, restive under the sway of misgovernment, would have feared to tell newspapermen some of the things which were spread before the public, arousing the animosity of the voters, and thus furnishing the means for Messrs. Barr, McGovern and Mansfield to be elected to their present places.

In a calmer moment Mr. Barr will realize this, and know that the public has the right to legitimate information about county business, no matter through what physical means it may be transmitted.

Democratic State Committee in Jam

The Democratic State Committee is in a jam which comes pretty near insuring an uninstructed delegation to Chicago with the possible exception that Gov. Roosevelt, of New York, may get the delegates-at-large.

National Committeeman Sedgwick Kistler and State Chairman John R. Collins are virtually accused of fomenting a "stop Roosevelt" movement by E. B. Zimmerman, secretary of the committee, and Warren Van Dyke, publicity director.

Mark Shields will talk over WCAE tomorrow evening at 6:35 on political developments.

UTILITY RATE WAR GAINS IMPETUS

Five Boroughs, Trade Bodies Join Fight; Father Cox Scores Excessive Costs

Five additional borough councils and trade bodies have joined the Pennsylvania Fair Rate Association's fight against high public utility rates.

A meeting of the Overbrook Board of Trade was postponed and the members, with 3,000 others, heard Father James R. Cox, of Old St. Patrick's Church, attack the utilities in Meyer Hall, at a meeting of the Independent Merchants of Overbrook.

Resolutions favoring membership in the association were passed by West View and Swissvale Councils and the trade boards of the Twenty-seventh Ward, North Side, and Bellevue. C. G. Cunningham, a director of the Overbrook board, said an indorsement would be passed by his group at the next meeting.

RAPS TAX EXEMPTION

High rates charged by public utilities and their exoneration from city taxes were the targets for Father Cox's attack.

He said:

"City Council furloughed 400 Public Safety Department employes to prevent a further tax increase. As it is now we are paying at least four mills too much to carry the property of public utilities in this city. In Pittsburgh the property of public utilities is valued at $275,000,000, and it is all exonerated.

"I was in Harrisburg last year as an observer on the Utilities Investigating Committee. The stories I heard were records of corruption, high rates, of lobbying and mixing into politics in a manner that shamed our state.

FIGHT AT SCRANTON

"In Scranton the people had a small water company organized years ago. There was only a dam and little equipment and probably could be built for $50,000. A New York concern bought it at a high price and immediately boosted the valuation to $57,000,000. The Public Service Commission thought this was too much and dropped it to $47,000,000."

Leo Ransil presided, and introduced Mr. Cunningham, who explained the Pennsylvania Fair Rate Association, and requested all to join the association's fight against unfair utilities' rates.

MOOSE TEMPLE MEET

Father Cox also spoke in Moose Temple, Penn avenue, at a meeting of the Allegheny County Meat Dealers Association. Later he went to the Pitt Theater, where the march of the jobless army to Washington was reproduced.

The Rev. George H. Broening was the principal speaker at the Bellevue meeting, at which officers were elected as follows:

W. H. Newmeyer, president; E. H. Wicks, C. J. DeBar and Augustus Freshkorn, vice presidents; Ben J. Moore, secretary, and Ralph Wetherspoon, treasurer.

A. Maxwell, of the Welfare Fund, addressed the meeting of the Twenty-seventh Ward group, explaining the work of the fund.

EMPTY HOUSES LISTED, SAYS PROBER

Voters Enrolled Residents Of Vacant Lots, Jury Told In Trial of 1st Ward Men

Vacant lots, empty houses and warehouses were used as addresses of some voters in the First Ward in the last September primary, Pete Connors, investigator, testified today in the trial of five politicians accused of vote conspiracy.

Over numerous objections by defense counsel, Connors told of more than a dozen such cases. He was still on the stand late this afternoon.

AFFIDAVITS ASSAILED

Connors' revelations followed the testimony of other witnesses who branded as forgeries the affidavits upon which almost 700 of 922 assessments were made for tax receipts.

Two tax board employes, John C. O'Donnell and John Kane, yesterday testified that their names had been forged to affidavits they were supposed to have taken in the tax office on September 1. O'Donnell said that 65 signatures, supposed to be his, were not genuine, while Kane testified that 300 others, supposed to be his, also had been forged.

THIRD MAN TESTIFIES

This morning Thomas J. Cannon, a subordinate assessor, was shown 302 affadavits which bore signatures supposed to be his. He told the court that none was genuine.

Cannon, like O'Donnell and Kane, said he was not in the tax office on the day he was supposed to have accepted the affidavits, being assigned to field work in Homestead.

Thirty other witnesses, 18 appearing yesterday and 12 this morning, were shown affidavits supposed to have been signed by them for assessment.

All but one said the signatures were forgeries.

DEFENSE LOSES POINT

Admission of the additional assessment book, AE, which Frank Alpert, subordinate assessor, one of those indicted but who turned state's evidence, said he had "written up" was a point won by Attorney Clunk, over the protest of four of the defense counsel.

It was in this book that Alpert testified that he had written names given him by Paul Walsh, First Ward Constable and son of Police Supt. Peter P. Walsh, one of the accused politicians. Others accused are C. J. McBride, a secretary in the board's office; George J. Schad, former board chairman; Samuel I. Ramsey, assistant chief clerk, and Saul Klein, battalion fire chief.

Mansfield to Serve Out Term in Senate

Aims to Push County Interests; Will Give Pay to Charity

County Commissioner William D. Mansfield today announced he would serve the remainder of his term as state senator, which expires December 31, 1934. This means he will attend the regular session of the Legislature in 1933.

Mansfield said his compensation for the 1933 session — $3,000 — would be given, with actual expenses deducted, to the agency or agencies doing the most at that time to relieve unemployment in the county.

Mansfield said his committee position in the Senate, held by seniority, would be of value in having enacted legislation to be sought by the new County Commissioners. He also recognized his duties as chairman of the Republican County Executive Committee pledge him to carry out the spirit of a resolution adopted when he took that office.

The resolution urges:

Permanent registration of voters, abolition of the poll tax as a qualification for voting, strengthening of the restricting assistance for voters.

A penalty against County Commissioners who refuse to permit citizens to inspect election returns.

Empowering of County Commissioners to audit Poor Board accounts.

Return of a substantial portion of the state gasoline tax to the municipalities from which it was collected.

AID FOR 15,000 FAMILIES NEAR

Relief for the 15,000 families cut off by the poor directors last month when funds were exhausted will be given as long as new funds obtained last, Maj. J. Clyde Miller, chairman of the poor directors, announced today. He said not all of the $600,000 loan was intended for relief, as the maintenance of institutions requires about $75,000 a month.

Present plans call for referring cases of employable family heads to the Allegheny County Emergency Association. Families without a head or unable to work will be cared for by the poor directors as in the past. Where the Emergency Association is unable to aid, the poor directors will act.

It is expected that $100,000 will be available for poor relief, but that amount, Maj. Miller said, probably would not last until tax money is available. He expects a lessening of demand for coal and shoes in a short time.

Dr. Fletcher, Pitt Professor, Dead

Dr. Hugh M. Fletcher, assistant professor of economics at the University of Pittsburgh, died today in Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore. He underwent an operation eight days ago. Dr. Fletcher had been at the university five years, coming here from the University of Illinois. He lived at 4 Buffalo street, Oakland. Besides his widow he leaves a daughter, Ruth, 6, and a son, Malcolm, 5.

Anna Fellabaum, 45, suffered concussion of the brain when struck by an auto on McKeesport-Pittsburgh boulevard today.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Oh boy, I was glad to set my old big feet on American soil, even if it has got a second mortgage on it. Had the greatest trip I ever had in my life and I believe if everybody made it they might come back a little poorer, but better off in the feeling toward our country. I know business is off, they say 60 per cent, well, that still leaves us 30 per cent ahead of anywhere I have seen. If we can just let other people alone and do their own fighting. When you get into trouble 5,000 miles away from home you've got to have been looking for it. Yours, Will.

Squirrel Hill Home Damaged by Fire

The home of William Keyley, 530 Lilac street, was damaged by fire last night. Battalion Chief Frank Harris estimated the damage at $400.

INDICT SQUIRE, CONSTABLE

John C. Metz, justice of the peace in Kennedy Township, and Constable Edward Brubaugh, of Ben Avon, were indicted by the grand jury today on two charges of extortion and two charges of conspiring to extort.

Last week Metz and two other constables pleaded no defense to another extortion charge.

Today's indictments accused Metz and Brubaugh of attempting to extort money from Rose Mondel, Groveton storekeeper; Mrs. Frank Cacia, Imperial dance hall operator; Martha Kaczmarek, Neville Island storekeeper; David J. Wright, Heidelberg storekeeper; Steve Host, Tyre storekeeper; W. Barclay Bishop, Gregg storekeeper; Mary Campbell, lunch room owner, and Jean Reagan, Campbell's Run road tea room owner.

Carpenter Falls On Lawn Street

Collapsing on the street in front of 319 Lawn street, a man believed to have been John Mitchell, 80 Congress street, a carpenter, was rushed to the Homeopathic Hospital today, where he was pronounced dead. The hospital reported death due to heart ailment. Indentification was made by morgue officials from cards found in the clothing.

Everyone Wants To Be Motorman On Political Car

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

If the Democrats don't win the next election then there is no balm in Gilead or points celestial.

We are just finishing three of the finest Republican administrations ever recorded in the archives of history or on a police blotter.

The boys grabbed everything that wasn't nailed down. If it was tacked down they grabbed the nails too.

It has been 12 years since a Democratic executive read the legend on the White House doormat and found that he was welcome.

This is the big year. But what are the boys doing? In their usual ante-mortem scramtles they are ignoring the substance and dividing the shadows.

Instead of getting together and fixing their blueprints, every politician wants to be the nominee. There are now 50 passengers on that presidential trolley car and every one is yanking on the bellrope.

There ain't much difference between the Republicans and the Democrats before election.

You could open up the world's biggest hardware store with the knives that politicians stick into one another's backs.

PIONEER RELICS SHOWN HERE

A great revival of interest in all things pertaining to George Washington and the period in which he lived is evident everywhere this month. Pittsburghers, especially, have a wealth of relics, because Washington visited this territory in his early manhood.

This revival of interest will be reflected in the Washington essay contest which will begin on Sunday, with the publication of Washington's Farewell Address in the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. This contest is open to all school students in Western Pennsylvania.

Nearly every Pittsburgh family of long residence here, has at some time or other resurrected from some forgotten attic or cellar nook a piece of furniture, clothing, jewelry or what not from the period in which Washington lived.

Probably one of the most unusual and varied collections ever displayed at Gimbels Department Store, through the co-operation of residents of Pittsburgh and nearby towns. It consists of spinning wheels, poster beds, candle molds, colonial chairs, grandfather clocks, a lock of Washington's hair, brass candlesticks, pewter and china dishes, ancient cutlery and coins, rag rugs, costumes and jewelry, old land deeds, quilts, guns, powder horns and all the accessories of the open fireplaces of colonial days.

Pinchot 'Slate' Beaten As Road Chiefs Elect

Anti-Pinchot candidates won the only contested offices when the Pennsylvania State Association of Township Supervisors elected officers today in the William Penn Hotel.

J. Garfield Bagshaw, of Blair County, was named president over C. C. Gingrich, of Lebanon County, by 120 votes to 35. Edward F. Bracken, of Chester County, was elected first vice president by a vote of 86 to 69.

Other successful nominees, unopposed, were satisfactory to both groups: J. F. Lawson, McKean County, second vice president; Robert A. Stoughton, Somerset County, third vice president; H. A. Thompson, Upper Darby, Pa., secretary; I. F. Bogner, Dauphin County, treasurer.

TEACHERS' PAY CUTS FOUGHT

A plea for maintenance of Allegheny County teachers' salaries at their present level was made today by Dr. G. D. Whitney, professor of vocational education at the University of Pittsburgh, member of the Advisory Commission to State Superintendent of Public Instruction, and president of the Aspinwall Parent-Teacher Association.

Dr. Whitney urged every parent-teacher association in the county to counsel their school boards to calm, clear thinking before considering any action in reducing teachers' salaries similar to the "voluntary" salary rebates offered by teachers in Homestead and North Versailles school districts.

Bellevue teachers yesterday voted unanimously to reject a 5 per cent voluntary wage cut suggested by the school board.

Dr. Whitney approved the stand taken by C. E. Dickey, County Superintendent of Schools, and Dr. James N. Rule, state superintendent, in opposing the action in Homestead and North Versailles pending a ruling by the Attorney General on the effect the "rebates" will have on granting of state aid to the school districts in question.

Livingston developed into a famous tramp. He accumulated passes over many railroads in recognition for his services in preventing wrecks. He collected autographs of presidents, knew Edison and Burbank.

In 1914, he settled down. 10 years later he took up lecturing as his life's last duty.

GENERAL HERE, CITES AIR NEED

The performance of airplanes at Shanghai was cited today by Maj. Gen. Paul B. Malone, commanding the Third Corps Area, as evidence of the need for the advancement of that wing of American military forces. Gen. Malone arrived this morning to inspect Reserve and National Guard units of the 99th Division.

He addressed staff officers of the 99th at headquarters in the Westinghouse Building. He said:

"The infantry always will remain, as Napoleon described it, 'The Queen of Battle.' The World War took 89 per cent of its dead and wounded from infantry ranks. The infantry always will be required to seize and hold positions.

"Airplanes have assumed a tremendous importance, now that they can climb to amazing heights and deliver bombs with accuracy."

Gen. Malone's address to the officers included the recollection that their commanding officer, Col. T. M. Anderson, led a company that captured a key blockhouse at Santiago within 300 yards from Malone in 1898.

Gen. Malone spoke at a luncheon of the American Legion at the Nixon restaurant. He will speak tonight at Carnegie Lecture Hall on "International Trade in Its Relationship to War and National Defense."

Cochrane Deal Dropped. Schwartz in Come-Back.

MACKIAN CATCHER LOSES HIGH RANK

IT HAS BEEN said for Mickey Cochrane that his poor showing behind the bat for the A's in the last world series was due largely to a leg so sore he could barely put his weight on it. Yet the heads of rival clubs in the American League seemingly are unwilling to accept that as an explanation of Cochrane's failure to play up to form. The opinion appears to be that if Mickey ever was as great as he was reputed to be, he has lost so much of his ability that he will never again be the same catcher.

Mickey Cochrane

Clark Griffith, Washington president, openly expresses the view that Cochrane has been overrated, and now it develops that the Yankee management has lowered its estimate of Mickey's value to such an extent that it has abandoned a deal which it planned to make for him. In spite of having such a fine young catcher as Bill Dickey on their roster, the Yank bosses, prior to the 1931 world series, were so eager to get Cochrane that they were preparing to offer in exchange for him some playing material of established worth and $50,000 in cash.

OUTSIDERS COULDN'T SEE the need for Cochrane with Dickey on the job particularly as both are lefthand hitters. Perhaps the aim was to help New York's pennant chances by not only strengthening the Yankees, but at the same time weakening the Athletics. However, the collapse of Mickey in the classic cooled the Ruppert-McCarthy ardor for the Mackian backstop.

Since that time they have manifested no further interest in him. Even recently when Dickey was a holdout, they made no attempt to reopen negotiations. So that last world series appears to have ended Cochrane's reign as the leading maskman of the majors, and the general belief is that from now on he won't rank very high above the ordinary.

THAT YOUNG DICKEY will succeed the Philadelphia receiver as the leading catcher of the American League, at least, there is hardly any doubt. He was in a fair way to have accomplished that anyhow, even if Mickey hadn't gone to pieces all at once.

Few young catchers rise to stardom as quickly as did Dickey. Not only did he catch in as many as 130 games in 1929, 109 in 1930 and 125 in 1931, but he also hit .324 in his first year, .339 in his second and .327 last season. And as he's only 24 there's a long career ahead of him.

WHEN JACKIE FIELDS recently became welterweight champion for the second time in the Kearns-Alvis round robin, he named his old conqueror, Young Corbett, as the first man he wanted to meet. But when Jack Doyle, coast promoter, tried to arrange such a match, Manager Kearns demanded the modest sum of $50,000 for Fields' end. That killed the thing right there, which perhaps is what Kearns aimed to do. Doyle recalled that in 1928 he had paid Fields and Sergt. Sammy Baker $12,500 each and that the show had grossed only $24,000. He says he wouldn't give Fields as much as $10,000 to defend his title out there against Corbett, as the latter, not the champion, would be the one to bring in the crowd.

Corp. Izzy Schwartz

HAVING MADE A successful start by stopping Jack Terranova in five rounds at Jamaica Monday night, Corp Izzy Schwartz, former flyweight titleholder and the latest ring champion to be bitten by the comeback bug, is confident that with a few more bouts under his belt he will be able to qualify for a match with one of the top-notchers.

Schwartz, now a featherweight, sees a chance for honors in that class through Battling Battalino's withdrawal. He formerly held the flyweight title, and among his other bouts were four with Willie Davies, of Charleroi, including one before the fans of this district on September 16, 1929, in which Willie got the decision. The Corporal, now 29, began to box in 1922 and retired a couple of years ago. He has been working as a moving picture operator.

LAST YEAR THEY brought up Paul Derringer, and this year they'll spring Dizzy Dean, Ray Starr and Tex Carleton, but the Cardinals' supply of available young pitching material doesn't end there. President Sam Breadon says the 1933 season will find his club with the outstanding pitcher of the last decade.

The name of this one is Lee, and he is to fling for Columbus in the American Association this year. Last season he was with Danville. He is only 19, stands 6 feet 2 inches, and Breadon asserts he has such uncommon ability that he looks like an approach to a second Mathewson.

THE DUQUESNE UNIVERSITY gym has been selected as the scene of the basketball clinic which Johnny Freund plans for Saturday afternoon. The Rosenblum Celtics will play an exhibition game for the scholastic players of the district and afterward will answer any question the youngsters may ask on the fine points of the game. It is also expected that a large number of scholastic players will attend the pro game in Motor Square Garden Friday night between the Rosies and the Brooklyn Americans.

THE ACHIEVEMENT OF Augie Kieckhefer, of Chicago, in winning the world three-cushion billiard championship for the tenth time, equaling the record for total title wins established by Johnny Layton, recalls to Pittsburgh cue fans the fact that one of Kieckhefer's previous victories was scored in this city.

That occasion, in October of 1921, marked the only time a world championship three-cushion tournament ever was held in Pittsburgh. It was due to the enterprise of Charley Ellis, local room keeper and himself a former champion, that the big event was brought here, and it took place in the parlor that Ellis had just opened in Diamond street.

FROM AN ARTISTIC viewpoint the tourney was a great success, producing some of the keenest competition and most brilliant individual performances ever seen anywhere, together with one of the closest finishes in the history of title play.

As was the case in Chicago this week, Kieckhefer did not clinch his championship victory in the Pittsburgh event until his final game. Johnny Layton had a chance to get a tie with Augie for first place by winning his last contest, which would have necessitated a playoff, but he failed to make the hurdle and the crown went to Kieckhefer.

Augie Kieckhefer

SOME OF THE most famous angle stars of all time took part in that tournament. In addition to Kieckhefer and Layton, the classy field included Bob Cannefax and Charles Otis, both now dead; Charley McCourt and Cowboy Weston, Pittsburgh entrants, McCourt being a former champion; Alfredo DeOro, Cuba's age marvel; Tiff Denton and Hugh Heal. Ellis officiated as referee of all matches except those in which McCourt was a principal, when he stepped aside in favor of Bob Carter for the reason that Ellis and McCourt were business partners.

ALLEGHENY FIVE TO REST

AMERICAN ACE TWICE BREAKS RECORD

OLYMPIC BOB RUN, LAKE PLACID, N. Y., Feb. 10.—(AP)—Hubert Stevens, of Lake Placid, twice smashed the world record for two-man bobs to catch Reto Capadrutt, sensational young Swiss, in the final two heats of the Olympic competition today and retain for the United States the title Jack Heaton won at St. Moritz in 1928.

Going into the final day 4.28 seconds behind the 20 year old Swiss after the first two heats yesterday, Stevens turned in two almost unbelievable perfect runs of 1.59.69 and 1.57.68, both times smashing the record. Capadrutt set on his first run today, his final total time for the four years of the competition was 8 minutes, 14.74 seconds. Capadrutt finished his last run in 1.59.67, to take second place, 1.54 seconds behind Stevens.

SENSATIONAL BATTLE

No other bob run ever saw the terrific speed Stevens and the young Swiss developed today as they battled for the Olympic title. The remainder of the field of 12 sleds of eight nations were distanced almost from the start. Among them was Jack Heaton, American living abroad, who won the two-man title in 1928.

A crowd of 10,000 lined the course in zero weather to see the greatest of all two-man bobsled struggles and neither Stevens nor Capadrutt disappointed them. Stevens almost made up the 4.28 seconds he needed to catch Capadrutt on the first run, when he came down the course in 1.59.69 as the Swiss turned in 2.03.52. Capadrutt made a magnificent run of 1.59.67 in his final heat, but again Stevens turned in a new world record, 1.57.68, to clinch the championship.

JACK HEATON THIRD

Jack Heaton, defeated titleholder, finished third, with Lieut. A. I. Papana, Rumanian army officer, fourth; Hanns Kilian, one of the last of the German drivers, fifth; Count Theo Rossi di Montelera, of Italy, sixth; Werner Huth of Germany, seventh; Agostino Lanfranchi, of Italy, eighth; Max Houben, Belgium, ninth; Christian Hansez, Belgium, tenth; Louis Balsan, France, eleventh, and Hugo Weinstengel, of Austria, last.

Total time for first two heats yesterday, today's time, and final time:

Max Houben and Louis Van Hege, Belgium, 4.32.54, 3.10.80, 2.06.82—9.50.16.
Lieut. A. I. Papana and Capt. Hubert Rumania, 4.23.55, 2.04.12, 2.05.02—8.32.69.

Hubert Stevens and Curtis Stevens, United States, 4.17.27, 1.59.69, 1.57.68—8.14.74.
Reto Capadrutt and Oscar Geer, Switzerland, 4.17.80, 2.00.47, 1.59.67—8.18.24.
Hanns Kilian and Sebastian Hubert, Germany, 4.20.55, 2.05.02, 2.03.19—8.29.16.

UTTERSTROM WINS RACE

Sven Utterstrom, of Sweden, world 50 kilometres champion, today won the first of the Olympic ski events, the 18 kilometres cross-country run, beating the defending champion Johan Grottumsbraaten, of Norway, who finished sixth and collapsed over the line. Utterstrom's time for the course, about 12 miles, was one hour, 23 minutes, 7 seconds.

Alex Vikstrom, also of Sweden, finished second, exactly two minutes behind Utterstrom, whose time was not considered fast, considering the rather easy course.

Veli Saarinen, of Finland, was third, close on Utterstrom's heels with Martti Lappalanen, of Finland, fourth, Arne Rustadstuen, of Norway, fifth, and Grottumsbraaten, a few seconds back in sixth place.

Valmari Toikka, of Finland, finished seventh in the lot of 62 starters representing 11 nations who went off over the trails at one minute intervals.

REISELT WINS SECOND PLACE

CHICAGO, Feb. 10.—(AP)—Otto Reiselt, of Philadelphia, came back after his defeat by Augie Kieckhefer, for the world three-cushion billiards championship, to defeat Arthur Thurnblad, of Chicago, the 1931 titlewinner, for second place and a prize of $8,100.

Reiselt needed only 44 innings in which to overcome Thurnblad, 50 to 30.

Johnny Layton, Sedalia, Mo., won two matches in another playoff and finished in fourth place. He defeated Frank Scoville, of Buffalo, N. Y., 50 to 40, in 45 innings, and came right back to defeat Gus Copulos, of Eugene, Ore., 50 to 40, in 53 innings.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: THE FIRING LIFE OF A BIG GUN—The larger the gun the shorter its firing life. With the firing of the first projectile a deterioration of the interior of the muzzle sets in, known as erosion. It is due to the chemical effect of the terrific temperature and the expansion of gas as well as the mechanical action of the projectile moving with colossal velocity. They cause the surface of the bore to crack, affecting both speed and accuracy of the projectile to an increasing degree. In the case of the giant 16-inch ordnance, which fires a 2,400-pound projectile with a powder charge of 850 pounds, an initial velocity of 2,800 feet a second, developing a muzzle energy of 121,430 foot-tons, the bore will be eroded beyond tolerance after the firing of about 50 shots. Computing the firing life on the duration of the actual contact of the projectile with the gun, it is obvious that a life span of three seconds is the maximum rather than the minimum predictable for the modern heavy ordnance.

TUNNEY SAYS 'POSITIVELY'

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—(AP)—The boys who have been building up the pleasant fiction that Gene Tunney contemplates a fighting comeback may just as well knock down the structure of their imagination.

On the authority of Tunney himself, the former world champion never has had and will not entertain now the slightest idea of returning to the ring, despite stories to the contrary.

"When I retired from the ring, I meant it," he said today. "I am still keenly interested in boxing and always will be. Why not? It was a big part of my life. But what a fool I would be ever to think of attempting a comeback."

But Jack Dempsey, it was suggested, appeared to be contemplating one.

"Yes, and I hate to think of it," replied the man who twice whipped the great Man Mauler. "You know," Gene added, "Dempsey did not want a third fight with me. When Tex Rickard proposed it, Jack, in effect, asked:

"What, and take a chance of being punched blind? No thanks!"

FLYNN DEFIES DEMPSEY

PHOENIX, Ariz., Feb. 10.—(INS.)—The only man who ever knocked out Jack Dempsey thinks so little of Dempsey's comeback ability that he today offered to box Dempsey three rounds and spot him two eyes to one.

Jim Flynn, the Pueblo (Col.) fireman, was the man who doubted the Manassa Mauler's ability to climb very far back.

"Dempsey has seen his day as a big fighter," said Flynn. "As old as I am, and blind in one eye, I would be tickled pink if someone would get me a three-round exhibition with Dempsey right now. He doesn't rate as a killer with me."

JACKETS READY FOR INDIANS

By CARL W. SHATTO

The gap in the Yellow Jackets' attacking forces occasioned by Earl Miller's departure to Toronto will be filled by Eddie Rodden when the Cleveland Indians come here for an International Hockey League game tomorrow night.

Eddie, a very clever and effective pivot man when he is in the mood to show some class, has failed to show his best form this season and has been on the bench for the last few weeks. Coach Charley Reis is of the opinion that the rest has done Eddie much good and expects him to be at his best against the Tribe.

Doc Romnes, who has been performing at center, will be shifted to left wing, at which position he was used when he first came here. Cliff Barton will continue to patrol the right lane.

Whether or not there will be any further changes in the Jackets' lineup tomorrow still is problematical. There is a strong possibility that Abbie Cox, injured goalie, who has been attempting to speed up the healing of his hurts by participating in spirited workouts, may return to his position in front of the Pittsburgh cage. Sonny Boy Baxter has been performing so effectively, however, that Cox will not be used unless he is sure that he is "right."

Reid still is testing Bob Trapp and Pat Shea, defense players sent here by the Chicago Hawks, but it is not likley that either will be seen in action against Cleveland.

CORAL GABLES, Fla., Feb. 10.—(AP)—Horace Tryon's 77 winningest hits, leading all other batters veterans and rookies for the Detroit shortstop, the possible lead in the All Valentine's golf tournament here. H. F. Bowbeer, of Chicago, was second with 78.

'GATORS DEFER BATTLE WITH GENEVA

GAMES TONIGHT

Bethany at Allegheny.
Juniata at Penn State.
West Virginia U. at Army.
Salem at Morris-Harvey.
Shepherd at Intermission, Martinsburg.

The Geneva-Allegheny basketball game originally scheduled tomorrow night in the Beaver Falls High School gymnasium has been postponed at the request of the Allegheny authorities, it was announced today by officials at Geneva College.

The Allegheny authorities asked for the postponement because of the heavy schedule of games played by the Gators during the past two weeks.

Allegheny suffered its first defeat of the season at New Wilmington last night when the Methodists bowed before Westminster College, 48-18.

The postponed contest likely will be played off at Beaver Falls next Thursday night.

DUKES TOP GENEVA

An inspired Duquesne University basketball team, playing without the services of Marty Reiter, one of its best nets, who is recovering from an attack of grippe in New York, rose to supreme heights in the Pitt Stadium Pavilion last night to defeat Geneva College, its arch rival from Beaver Falls. The score was 28 to 25.

The battle, one of those see-saw affairs that usually marks encounters between the Dukes and Covenanters, proved a thriller from start to finish.

Irving Brenner, injected into the Dukes' lineup to fill the shoes of his ailing teammate, covered himself with glory by the manner in which he conducted himself throughout the 40 minutes of heated action. Brenner played a whale of a defensive game besides contributing three important field goals and a foul on the offense.

AULTMAN SHINES

Another who stood out in the hectic struggle was Cliff Aultman, brilliant guard of the Geneva quintet. Aultman was a tower of strength on the defense for the Covenanters. He broke up numerous Duke passes and was a thorn in the side for the Bluffites when they attempted the pivot play.

With the lead changing hands frequently during the early stages of the first half, the Dukes managed to pull away in the closing minutes of the opening session to a 20-12 advantage over the Covenanters when the first gun sounded. Feldman, McGeever, Moore and Brenner each counted two double-deckers, which, coupled with four Duke foul throws, represented the Bluffites' total in the first half.

Two field goals by Manning and two by Montgomery and four fouls accounted for Geneva's 12 points at the interim.

The Covenanters struck their stride shortly after the Dukes had increased their lead at the start of the second half when Moore counted on a field goal. Field goals by Montgomery and Grahame and a field goal and two fouls by Manning enabled the Loeffler charges to pull up within a point of the Dukes.

BRENNER SCORES WELL

Brenner then came through with a double-decker and a foul to place the Bluffites four points ahead at 25-21. Manning cut the lead to two points with a basket, but Grahame fouled Feldman and the Duke forward made good on the charity toss to give the Dukes a 26-23 edge over the Covenanters. Ginsberg, a 17-year-old youngster, sent in to forward by Coach Loeffler, then electrified the crowd by dribbling through the entire Bluff team to register a field goal and place his mates within a point of tying the score. With four and one-half minutes to play, Feldman registered a field goal that placed the game on ice.

The Duquesne University Freshmen came through with their thirty-fifth straight victory by defeating the Geneva Reserves in the preliminary game, 31 to 14. The Bluff Yearlings led from the start and never were threatened. Frank Serany, Hazleton flash, led the Dukes' attack. The lineups:

South Hills is runner-up in Section 2, yesterday having disposed of Oliver, 25 to 19. Taylor Allderdice won from Westinghouse, 42-20, and Langley bumped Allegheny Vocational, 31-13, in the other two contests.

In City Junior League warfare, South, Latimer, Herron Hill and Gladstone returned victories.

DREYFUSSIANS

Stories They Tell of the Late Barney Dreyfuss

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Although his sportsmanship was reflected in his many official acts at baseball's council table, Barney Dreyfuss was known as a "tough loser." He was of the type that dissects a game and shows where the contest could have been won had a certain thing been done here or there or if the umpire had not been the next thing to a crook.

Dreyfuss' targets for abuse after a lost battle of tension were not confined to his managers, players or rival performers. More than once he has gone out of his way to jump on the men who call the decisions.

One of Barney's latest escapades with the "umps" took as its victim a personage no less renowned than Sir William Klem. The scene occurred shortly after Bill's unsuccessful plunge into Florida real estate wherein Klem lost much money. But if Klem was the victim, he was not so sensitive that he could not get a laugh out of the situation; in fact, Bill told me of the incident.

Klem and Barry McCormick had just reached their little dugout dressing room at Forbes Field after a very trying battle. The Pirates lost and their owner was fit to be tied. Barney's ire was especially directed at the umpires and he could not resist the urge to berate them in their dressing room. Klem had not seen Dreyfuss for a long period, and when Barney popped into their little room the umpire knew something was up. Dreyfuss was excited and anxious to hop on McCormick.

Instead of resenting the intrusion into their little castle, Klem extended his hand and shouted:

"How are you, Mr. Dreyfuss? I haven't seen you for a long time. You're looking fine. Where have you been to get in such fine shape?"

This parry unarmed Dreyfuss for the nonce and he proceeded to tell Bill all about his good health. Eventually, however, he looked across the little room where McCormick was preparing for his "bawth." Turning to the other official, Dreyfuss shouted:

"Hey, there, McCormick—you were rotten today!"

Klem lost his even poise at this sally and proceeded to fly into the magnate. Well, the scene became hotter, particularly so, when Barney told Klem that he was pretty bad, too.

As Dreyfuss turned to leave, Klem yelled fiercely:

"And don't forget—I know a lot more about baseball than you do!"

(Follow this series of reminiscenses of the late Barney Dreyfuss daily in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.)

Swim Marks to Be Given Tests Tonight

Three senior swimming records of the Allegheny Mountain Association, A. A. U., will be put "on the spot" tonight in the Keystone A. C. pool.

The best of the local splashers will toe the line to lower the present marks in the 100-yard free style and 200-yard breast stroke for me, and the 100-yard free style for women events.

Lenore Kight, of Homestead Library, is the favorite to clip the time in the women's century swim, and Hanna, Denny and Schmieler, of Pat Corr's Pitt natators, along with Lindberg and McLaughlin, of Homestead, will furnish the competition among the men.

PIRATES PLAN ON SIGNING HOLDOUTS

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

The baseball "holdout" will be a very scarce commodity in the Pirate ranks in the course of a week or two, it was intimated at the home office today. One week from tonight the advance guard of Buccos will leave Pittsburgh for the California training camp.

Ervin Brame

Officials of the club refused to give out the exact number of signed Pirates up to date, but they were emphatic in their statements that they were as well off as any club in the matter of duly qualified members of the team.

"You may state that both of the Waner boys will be in line soon," said one of the heads of the club. Apparently the money differences that keep the two great outfield stars out of the fold are not enough to cause any alarm. And the same condition applies to Ervin Brame, Larry French and Tony Piet, who also are having contract difficulties.

REDUCTIONS LIKELY

That several of the outstanding members of the club will be forced to accept pay reductions goes without saying. The magnates at their Chicago meeting decided to lop off on the big pay checks and the Pittsburgh officials are living up to the agreement.

The Pittsburgh reductions, for the most part, are believed to be very reasonable. Brame, it was reported from his Kentucky home, balked at signing a contract that called for a 12 per cent reduction. If the big pitcher fared no worse he does not appear to present a serious case.

Manager George Gibson is busy with training-camp details and other important matters pertaining to the club. Gibby will have charge of the batterymen as they journey to camp.

DAVY BROWN SIGNS

Davy Brown, Oakland youngster and one of the outstanding semi-pro baseball players of the Pittsburgh district, yesterday signed a contract with the Harrisburg club of the New York-Pennsylvania League. He was signed by Eddie Onslow, who will pilot the Harrisburg club. The team is under the control of the Philadelphia Athletics.

Jack Onslow, Eddie's brother, who is coach of the Philadelphia Nationals, is partly responsible for the advance of Brown. Jack heard so many tributes on Davy he advised his brother to sign him. The Philly coach is making his winter home in Pittsburgh.

Two more members of the Hyatt family, made famous by the exploits of the incomparable Charley, of Pitt and Uniontown High School fame, Mansfield, the youngest of the three boys, is a forward on the Schenley High School scrub team, while Arthur plays regularly at center and is the leading scorer in the City League.

BUFF DONNELLI AND SICKLES TO CLASH

By TOM BIRKS

With Morgan and the Morrys scheduled to tangle Sunday at South Park in the replayed semi-final West Penn game, fans in the district are looking forward to the duel between Harry Sickles and Buff Donnelli.

In the two games already played honors have been divided between the dashing Duquesne man and the burly Sickles, and the next session is likely to be more than worth while.

Last Sunday it was the brilliant defensive play of Sickles that put Robertson, the Akron center, out of the picture. The Akron defense played into Sickles' hands by giving him plenty of room to clear before the Rubber vanguard could get into range.

This was the mistake made by Morgan in the first game, but Buff did not appear to be taking any more chances than necessary in the second game.

The Morrys, filled with success after beating the amateur champions, will prove a tough team to beat. Zeewan proved himself the best winger in this district, although they did not get his best out of him.

Johnny Jaap is back in the American Professional League, playing outside left for the New York Giants. This is a new position for him. Johnny started as a center forward, was switched to outside right by Bethlehem Steel, and now is playing outside left.

W. & J. SPORTS FUTURE AT STAKE

WASHINGTON, Pa., Feb. 10.—Wash-Jeff's sports future will be determined here tomorrow night when the board of trustees meets with the athletic council and President Ralph C. Hutchison.

Dr. Hutchison made it known he expected to submit to the trustees his plan for the operation of sports, both intercollegiate and intramural, as well as the result of conferences he has held with the athletic council since he assumed the presidency five months ago.

Among problems to be discussed are the heavy financial deficit, failure of intercollegiate sports to be self-sustaining over a period of several years, lack of proper equipment and stadium facilities and whether intercollegiate sports are making their fullest possible contribution to college life and spirit.

The president's plan will be of a practical nature with a view to adjusting the school's athletics to come within natural bounds laid down by facts and conditions and with due regard for the highest academic ideals.

MOOSE ARENA BOUTS OFF TONIGHT

TONIGHT'S FIGHTS

Benefit amateur bouts in Madison Square Garden, New York.
Amateur bouts: Sands A. C., Union town, Pa.
Jose Santa vs. Hans Birke, 10 rounds, Oakland, Cal.
W. A. J. vs. Bucknell, Lewisburg, Pa.
Gene Stanton vs. Dick Powell, 10 rounds, and Frankie Reills vs. K. O. Hosking, 8 rounds, Clarksburg, W. Va.

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor

Bloots! Thus goes the boxing show planned for the Moose Temple tonight.

Promoter Apples Meyers called it off late yesterday when he found it impossible to arrange a suitable substitute main bout to replace the Mose Butch-Lew Farber thing called off when Butch was taken down with the flu. Davy Grove of the North Side, who was to meet Rogers Brooks of Cleveland in the semi-final, became similarly indisposed yesterday.

SALERNO NEXT CARD

Rather than risk a bad show on top of his two good ones so far, Meyers announced he will hold over the whole preliminary card until next Wednesday night, when he will show Guy Salerno, Jack Perry's middleweight star in the main bout against a good opponent. Right now he is dickering to bring Jack Wilson back from New York. Wilson, who boxed an eight-round bout in Madison Square Garden last Friday night, is known to the local fans as a tough game and willing mixer and good puncher and should serve as a good test for California's native son.

Meanwhile Matchmaker Jules Beck, of Motor Square Garden, is trying to pick up the pieces of his Benny Bass-Frankie Bojarski battle for next Monday night. Bojarski had to pull out because of a bad ear. Charley Baxter can't take his place because of a cut eye and Beck can't think because of a headache over it all.

PAUL DUE TODAY

Tommy Paul, of Buffalo, was due to arrive in town today from Buffalo and work out in the Pittsburgh Lyceum gym for his bout with Joey Thomas, of the North Side, at Eddie Kapphan's arena in the Hill district, Friday night. Meanwhile Matchmaker Bill Dummer is at work on his preliminaries. He closed today with Petey Jahn and Jimmy Gilligan for the opening bout.

The card is complete for the show in McKeesport tomorrow night, with Tony Marino, of McKeesport, and Franklin Young, of Detroit, boxing the main bout. Tom Malco and Matty Oldach box the semi-final. Charley Blazevich and Angelo Vergione are in the second bout and Patsy Hennigan and Don Frazier box the opener.

Between Rounds

Johnny Dunn, of New Kensington, and Rosy Grier, Canton Negro featherweight, box the 10-round main bout at East Liverpool, O., Friday night. Kenny Davis and Young Terry are in the six-round semi-final.

Allen Beatty, local Negro welterweight under the management of Mike Ray, is aiming to meet all-comers in his class.

Battling Glass, just back from Detroit, where he was confined to illness which prevented him from going through with a bout with Eddie Lord last Friday night, plans to put up solid at work, where he will re-enter training for a return bout against Eddie Anderson at Flint, Mich., February 23, and the re-scheduled Lord engagement in Detroit a week later.

Jimmy Thomas, Grove's colorful welterweight, is expected to be matched for Friday night at each week's card with a Wesley Bloom, Canton featherweight.

Phil Schneider, former lightweight boxer from Bethel Park, who has been handling Johnny Dunn, the Negro featherweight, the latter's manager, Jack Shafer, and matchmaker.

Paris Canty, former lightweight boxer of New Castle, has a 16-year-old heavyweight under his wing, whom he would like to match against Jerry Hart of one of our other county big fellows. The latter is Kenneth Hatton, who is 6 feet 2 inches tall and weighs 175 pounds. Canty has been training him for a year and says he is exceptionally promising.

Jimmy Moore, local boxing matchmaker, has served out his notice and is ready to meet any boxing or wrestling man in the city who wishes to meet him in the ring.

Leon Jenkins, Negro welterweight boxer, is expected to have a match in the near future. He is working out at the Lyceum for bouts.

Jack Lumbar, manager of Mare Hatch, has received an offer from Nate Lewis, matchmaker of the Chicago Stadium, for a bout to be the next tournament show to be held in that arena. Hatch will be in bed for a few more days and then will get back into shape to resume his fighting.

Charley Conway, amateur welterweight star, broke Eddie Price out of the hospital after overnight confinement in the Mercy Hospital. Price was taken there suffering from a severe cold.

Lou Tendler, Wilson boxing boss, has matched Sammy Bass, the one and only, for a return match at Wilson A. C. tomorrow night.

Cleveland Celtics Here for Battle

The Cleveland Roosevelts, world's foremost professional basketball team, arrived in the city from Canton, O., late last night, and will begin today familiarizing themselves with local conditions, after they have had their best for Pittsburgh fighters battle with the Big Six champion Meyer Dairy five, 31-30.

It was indicated today that one of the largest basketball crowds of the season would be on hand when the game got under way. The preliminary tilt featuring the Trinity Cardinals and Trinity Hawks, 10-year-old midget teams, begins at 8 o'clock, with the big game following. Out-of-towners may make reservations by calling Everglade 4297.

FIGHT CARD CHANGED

NEW YORK, Feb. 10 (AP)—Madison Square Garden's sports card for February 16 was revised today and the following bouts announced: Lou Feldman, Cincinnati, to box Ernesto Ibanez, Puerto Rican, 10 rounds, featherweight; Billy Townsend, Vancouver, B. C., vs. Eddie Fae, Polish welterweight, Chicago; Sal Desio, San Francisco, middleweight, vs. Vince Terry, Trenton, N. J., and Eddie (Kid) Wolfe, Memphis, welterweight, vs. Baby Joe Gans, Los Angeles.

United States government turned easy.

Foreigns again tended lower, but Japanese bonds continued to meet considerable support.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—(AP)—Transactions in the most active bonds on the New York Stock Exchange today were as follows. 000 omitted in sales column. (United States bonds in dollars and thirty-seconds of dollars.)

STOCK MARKET MEETS WITH SUPPORT

Backing Given in Same Area Where Decline of January Was Checked

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—The stock market met support today, in the same area where the decline was checked in early January.

The turn came after several issues had registered new lows in the early dealings, and was accomplished with a run in of shorts in Union Pacific, in advance of tomorrow's dividend meeting. Trade news was on the whole still rather gloomy, but Washington news to the effect that Senator Glass' bill to revise the federal reserve acts was being altered met with a favorable reception in some quarters in Wall street.

Union Pacific pushed up more than 3 points. Auburn fully recovered an early drop of nearly 6 points, which reduced it to 91½, in contrast to last week's high of 137¾. Morning losses of 1 to 2 points in prominent issues were generally erased, and net gains of similar extent appeared during the afternoon in such issues as United States Steel, American Can, American Telephone, Eastman, Westinghouse, Case, Du Pont, Consolidated Gas, Johns Manville, New York Central, Santa Fe, Missouri Pacific preferred and New Haven.

The market's ability to rally after price averages had approximated the bear market low of January 5 was regarded as encouraging by market theorists who would have regarded inability of the market to hold at the January resistance levels as indicating that the major trend was still downward. The rally, however, appeared largely dependent upon short covering for its motive power.

The upturn in Union Pacific was accompanied by rumors that directors tomorrow would declare the regular quarterly dividend of $2.50.

The drop of 87,203 tons in United States Steel's unfilled tonnage during January, reducing the total to the lowest in more than a score of years, had been fully anticipated, and was without appreciable market influence. "Iron Age" reported that ingot production was holding at 28 per cent of capacity. This review reported slackness of the motor trade rather gloomily, saying that it was doubtful whether February motor production would equal January's. In some brokerage quarters, however, somewhat more cheerful advices regarding the motor outlook were reported. The weekly report of electric power consumption, showing a reduction of 5.4 per cent from the like period of last year, was the best comparison since the week ended January 2.

SUGAR GROWERS CUT OUTPUT

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—Bitterness between sugar planters on opposite sides of the earth has soured the market for the sweet commodity.

Raw sugar has slumped to record lows for the history of the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange, as traders are disturbed over inability of Cuban and Javan producers to agree upon curtailing the new crop.

THE HAGUE, Holland, Feb. 10.—(AP.)—The Union of Java Sugar Producers informed the International Sugar Council today that production in 1933 will be reduced from 2,981,047 to 1,496,351 tons.

HAVANA, Feb. 10.—A decree drawn up for President Machado to sign, sets sugar exports to the United States at 2,306,602 tons from a crop of 3,061,602 tons for 1932. Added to the former figure is 367,019 tons from the last crop, or a total of 2,873,621 tons for the United States in 1932.

Forbes

Lost All But Courage; Now Back on Top

By B. C. FORBES

LET US, for a change, turn to something cheerful.

In America's largest city there is a "mysterious" gentleman who, under the assumed name of Mr. Glad, hands out during each winter thousands and thousands of sandwiches, coffee, gloves and nickels to all who come to get them — no questions asked.

B. C. Forbes

His benevolences have attracted nation-wide interest. The fact that he scrupulously hides his identity piques newspaper interest in him and his activities.

It so happens that Mr Glad has been one of my intimate friends for a quarter of a century.

His experience is worth reciting briefly at this time when so many are tempted to give up in despair.

MR. GLAD was a particularly bright business youth. The redoubtable, unique Phil Armour, founder of Armour & Co., spotted him, admired his vigor and dash, promoted him and as was his habit, rewarded him for especially meritorious acts with new suits of clothes.

By and by Mr. Glad launched out on his own. He built up a notably successful business by working prodigiously.

Then his health completely broke down.

FOR TWO YEARS he was totally laid aside. Physician after physician operated on him. From a fine, robust specimen of manhood, he shriveled to a skeleton.

His business waned and waned, finally ceased.

HE LOST EVERYTHING—except grit, except determination, except faith that he would re-enter the ring and fight his way once again to success.

At 52 he found himself sufficiently recovered to resume work.

THE OUTSTANDING feature of Mr. Glad's homely philanthropy is that he is personally on the job to cheer up every unfortunate who comes to enjoy the food offered, the warm gloves that go along with it and the nickel for carfare to hunt a job. Each recipient receives, in addition to the gifts and an encouraging smile, this cheerup card, which perhaps does more than everything else to encourage the downcast:

"Cheer up, brother. Every cloud has a silver lining. Keep up your nerve, and everything will come out all right. Six years ago everyone thought I was down and out except myself.

"I had had a two-year siege of illness which included four operations, and dropped from 180 to 93 pounds. My business, which had taken 15 years to build up, was smashed to smithereens, and I had to start all over at 52 years of age.

"I came back. So will you—if you have the heart and the health and the will to do. My business is again a success—enough so, at least, so that I can do this little to help others less fortunate.

"I am glad to do this little bit because my heart is filled with gratitude to my Maker for all the blessings He has bestowed upon me after everything looked so black—to everyone but me. I never lost hope. I want you to do likewise."

MR. GLAD forbids me to tell his real name, because, he explains:

"People would think what was being done was for the purpose of gaining publicity or notoriety for some personal benefit."

He has his business back, his 180 pounds back—and is probably the most truly happy man in America.

STEEL TONNAGE DECLINES

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—For the tenth consecutive month bookings of the United States Steel Corporation decreased as buying of steel products in January fell below the slightly accelerated increase in production. As of January 31, 1932, unfilled orders amounted to 2,648,150 tons, which compares with 2,735,353 tons on December 31, 1931, a decrease of 87,203 tons. As of January 31, 1931, unfilled tonnage totaled 4,132,351 tons.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—(AP)—The steel industry is unable to make progress against conditions which are restricting the purchase of material on almost every hand, Iron Age said today.

The publication estimated current ingot production at 28 per cent of capacity, unchanged from last week, but said there had been a sharp decline in volume of orders for some products, notably those going to the automobile industry. Expectations of an increase this month are based largely on prospective railroad purchases, chiefly rails.

BUSINESS

Bond Interest Earned By Three of Leading Steel Organizations.

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

ONLY THREE leading steel companies with funded debt were able to earn their bond interest requirements last year. A fourth may be added to the list if special income of United States Steel Corporation is taken into consideration. But without this non-recurring profit from the sale of physical properties, the largest steel producer fell short of covering its interest.

The three companies are Bethlehem Steel, National Steel and Inland Steel. The bonds of all three are currently selling at substantial discounts from their par values. In view of the fact that these organizations have been able to show a profit over bond interest during such a trying period as the past year, their equity securities should be of interest to the investment public.

Bethlehem Steel, the largest of the three, reported income available for interest only slightly in excess of requirements. This compared with a coverage of 4.2 times for 1930, 4.8 times for 1929, and 2.7 times for 1928.

Bethlehem's total income available for interest requirements in 1931 was $7,541,784, while interest and discount was $7,426,039. The company's funded debt amounts to $117,500,000. Only one issue of $8,200,000 serial 4½s was floated for the corporation direct. The remainder comprises assumed obligations and includes $12,759,000 of Bethlehem Steel Company first lien and refunding 5s, 1942. These are currently selling at about 90 to yield 6¾ per cent to maturity. The Bethlehem Steel Company was one of the organizations merged to form the present Bethlehem Steel Corporation.

National Steel Has Widest Bond Coverage

NATIONAL STEEL CORPORATION has not yet issued a detailed income statement for 1931, but its preliminary report, showing net profit of $4,443,323 after all charges and equivalent to $2.06 a share, indicates that interest requirements were covered more than three times. National earned an entire year's interest requirements in the first quarter of 1931.

The organization's direct funded debt consists of $40,000,000 first collateral mortgage 5s due in 1956. These are quoted at about 74 to yield 7.3 per cent to maturity. The high price since issuance early in 1931 was 91½. A low of 68 was reached in December.

National also enjoys the unique distinction of being the only major steel company to earn its dividend requirements in 1931. It also was the only company to go through the past two years without reducing or omitting a dividend.

Yield for National Highest of Three Units

STRANGE TO SAY, National's bonds have the highest yield of the three companies, although the organization also showed the widest coverage of bond interest. This probably is due to the fact that the company is younger than the other organizations and its bonds, outstanding only a year, have had less opportunity to develop a seasoned market.

Inland Steel Company has two issues of 4½s outstanding—the 4½s of 1978 being quoted at approximately 78 to yield 5.89 per cent to maturity and the 1981 maturity at 79½ to return 5.76 per cent. The two series are identical; there are $28,000,000 of the shorter maturity outstanding and $15,000,000 of the longer. Last year's results showed interest requirements to have been earned 1¾ times, compared with nearly 7 times in 1930; more than 11 times in 1929 and nearly times in 1928.

Railroad Property Return Off in '31

Class one railroads in 1931 had net operating income of $531,095,960, which was a return of 1.98 per cent on their property investment, according to the Bureau of Railway Economics. This was a decrease of 39.9 per cent below 1930, when net operating income amounted to $884,856,141, or 3.36 per cent on property investment.

Test of Recent Lows Expected in Market Circles

It is the popular anticipation that the previous lows in the averages of the various groups will be tested soon. With little developing to encourage aggressive buying either by speculative interests or by outsiders, and with the line of least resistance at least temporarily downward, the natural action of the trading contingent will be to sell stocks until more opposition is encountered when reactions are in progress. If a test of the lows is made, the extent of the resistance will be of unusual importance. Should leading stocks be halted, the result could be an active covering movement by shorts, with an impressive recovery.

While there has been considerable short selling in progress recently, evidence of scattered liquidation has not been lacking. Some of this outside supply was the result of the uncovering of stop loss orders. Nearby stops were in many of the popular trading stocks. Traders, believing that such a situation existed, "went gunning" to reach the limits on such orders. They were able to bring about an increase in public selling, but it was not large enough to permit active or heavy short covering without causing rallies.

Wall street can find reason for a hearty laugh once in a while, even in periods like the present, when slack commissions invite another tuck in the belt. The cause of a good deal of mirth in one quarter is the story told about one of the leading rubber tire companies. This company is reported to have had one of its plants working 24 hours a day for several months past. The plant which is operating at capacity, however, is a hard-rubber tire mill, which is not making tires for automobile trucks, but rather is running full blast to supply the demand from rural regions for replacement equipment for "buggies."

There has been evidence of persistent selling in some of the railroads which handled considerable coal traffic. This has been true in some of the recent sessions, particularly in the cases of Chesapeake and Ohio and Norfolk and Western. Various factors have affected the coal shipments of these lines. Competition from abroad has been keen, according to some interests. In addition the lessened industrial activities and the comparatively mild weather in certain sections served with coal by these carriers have curtailed shipments.

Wall street now is of the opinion that earnings of Hershey Chocolate for 1931 will not come up to some of the more optimistic predictions made several months ago. Warm weather in the fall and winter months affected the sale of chocolate bars and kept dealers from disposing of many of the old-sized bars as quickly as anticipated. Returns to the company are believed to have been larger than expected and this affected the earnings for the final three months of the year. It is said that the management will make every possible charge-off in the report for the year, so that 1932 will be started with a clean slate.

Current sales of F. W. Woolworth Co., Ltd., are showing a satisfactory trend, those for January having shown an increase over the like month last year, W. L. Stephenson, chairman and managing director, said on his arrival in New York from England. In 1931, he said, the company had in operation 470 units in England, an increase of 30 stores for the year.

CORPORATE EARNINGS

Butte Copper and Zinc Company reports for the year ended December 31, 1931, net loss of $29,784 after expenses and taxes, but before depletion, against net loss of $1,819 in 1930.

Spiegel, May Stern Company, Inc., and subsidiaries for year ended December 31, 1931, report profit from operations of the mail-order division of $50,121 after depreciation, interest charges etc. Operating losses of discontinued retail stores of subsidiary companies amounting to $528,590 and liquidating losses and expenses of subsidiaries aggregating $1,256,854, were charged against surplus account. In the year 1930 the company reported net loss of $2,257,613 after depreciation, interest, etc.

Commercial Credit Company reported net income of $3,775,406 for 1931, equivalent to $1.73 a share, compared with $4,316,000 or $2.02 a share in 1930.

Commercial Investment Trust Corporation reports for 1931 net profits of $7,534,966, equivalent to $2.54 a share, compared with $8,718,793 in 1930, or $2.75 a share. The profits for 1931 do not include dividends received on investments of the corporation in its own stock, nor any gain in the purchase for retirement of its own shares. The net volume of bills and accounts purchased during the year was $574,093,766, compared with $592,644,176 in 1930.

National Transit Company reports net profit of $566,355 for 1931. Dividends paid amounted to $509,000, the remainder being added to surplus. Improvements costing over $1,000,000 were made to the shops of the National Transit Pump and Machine Company. This money was taken from the reserve fund without special financing. Surplus at the end of the year totaled $3,208,625.

B. F. Goodrich Company reports in preliminary statement for 1931 consolidated net loss of $8,815,815 after depreciation, interest, foreign exchange losses and write-down to December 31 market prices of raw materials on hand and on commitment and material content of unfinished and finished goods. This compares with net loss of $8,374,148 in 1930.

EMBERS OF LOVE -:- Story of a Pretty Girl in Whom Burned The Flame of a Great Emotion -:- By HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER VI.

Now that Ken was here, it was perfect. The days were dreamy, rich with warm summer fragrance, the nights were enchanted.

Lily Lou was a burning brand of energy. She was up mixing cakes, doing the cooking in the kitchen even before her mother was out of bed. She no longer minded the slow starting wood range, the kettles of water that had to be heated on top of the stove. What are a few inconveniences when you're home?

She never wanted to sleep. She was never tired. She hardly cared to eat. She was so gay, so wildly, thrillingly alive.

Her mother liked Ken. She thought he was different from the rest of the summer crowd. Dad liked him, too. The others had gone home. Ken had lingered on for fishing.

"For fishing," he said. "That's as good excuse as any, isn't it?"

"Did you know I was here?"

Ken laughed delightedly. "Now why do you suppose I came up here at all?"

"I don't believe you."

"But it's true—it really is."

HARD AT PRACTICE

She wouldn't believe him. She wouldn't let herself believe him. When he came to take her riding she kept him waiting. Postponed meetings with him. Sat at the little golden oak upright piano practicing, practicing even her mother thought she overdid it. . . . "Lily Lou, you came up for a rest, dear. I think you ought to go out for a little ride with young Mr. Sargent, like he wants."

But she wouldn't go every often. She was intoxicated with this new feeling of power. She was strong. She could work. She wouldn't lose her head the way she did in April. She'd show Ken Sargent . . .

Their relationship had changed. Now it was he who looked up to her. He told her how lovely she was . . . quoted vagrant bits of poetry . . .

"The clustered softness of your waving hair,
That curious paleness which enchants me so,
And all your delicate strength and wonderful air . . ."

Sometimes she didn't understand all he said, but it flattered her . . . she remembered some of the words. She knew that Peggy Sage, with all her father's money, hadn't been able to excite his admiration as she, who didn't even try . . .

They lay on the raft, in the sun, Lily Lou indolent, creamy skinned, not even breathing hard after the swim. Ken was fair enough to burn an unbecoming angry pink, and he wasn't a strong swimmer . . . Lily Lou had the best of him again.

ADMITS DEFEAT

"I'm not much good, am I?" he asked. "It's a funny thing, the second generation never amounts to much. Now take my dad. He fought for what he's got. He's wonderful. But he wants me to go on where he left off, and I . . . I'm no good—"

"Ken, you MUSTN'T say that—"

"Oh, it's true. Now if they'd just let me do what I want . . . Get out with the ships, instead of fussing around that darned old office . . ."

"I know, Ken." Lily Lou patted his hand gently. She didn't know how it had happened, but things had certainly changed. It was he who needed her, even more than she needed him.

At least she kept it hidden. He couldn't.

Still, sitting on the porch, waiting for him at night, she could hardly bear it.

Her father would reach down and put his slow, tough old hand over hers. She knew what he was thinking . . . hoping she wouldn't be going out.

From the rocker her mother would say, "Dear, dear, the time goes so fast . . ."

That meant that soon Lily Lou would be leaving them again, and in the few nights that were left she oughtn't to slip away with Ken.

EMOTIONS CLASH

Lily Lou's soft heart ached for them. She wanted to shower them with love, to make up to them . . . they'd done so much for her . . . But in the midst of her tender thoughts for them, the thought of Ken would come stealing . . . under her father's warm palm her hand would tremble, her whole body would begin to shake with silly, cold excitement . . . suppose he didn't come . . . well, what of it? Suppose he didn't? What was it to her? And the cold perspiration would break out on her forehead, in the palms of her hands. She'd be almost sick with the intensity of waiting . . . her ears straining to hear every sound . . . was that a motor? Was it turning down the lane? . . . what if he didn't come?

Synopsis

Lily Lou Lansing, just 20 and pretty, is studying for an operatic career, but dreams of romance. One morning she meets wealthy Ken Sargent, who used to spend his summers in her home town. He is attracted by her beauty. Lily Lou's sister, May, with whom she boards, objects to Ken, calling his family "snobs." When Lily Lou tells Ken she cannot see him so often he leaves in anger. Ken no longer meets her mornings, and when Lily Lou sees him with another girl, she is depressed. Her sister suggests that she take a much-needed rest. She goes to her parents' home in Woodlake. Lily Lou hoped to escape Ken there, but his folks open their summer home. Ken visits her.

Now Go On

And then he'd drive up to the gate. There'd be the sound of the motor being shut off. His step on the hard dirt path, his voice "Lily Lou?" questioning in the dimness, and the glad warmth in it when he saw it was really she . . .

"Take your coat, Lily Lou," her mother would coax.

Coat? Lily Lou all warm and glowing . . . a coat? It would smother her. "No, I don't want a coat, mother!"

"You'd better. It gets cool later," her father would urge.

"But we won't be long!" Lily Lou would never admit that they were going to be long.

LOVE NO SECRET

They always started out the same way, he a little silent and disappointed because she had promised to be right back . . . she cool and self-possessed, all slim and pale in her summer clothes, her dark hair, sleek, pressed close to her head . . . and inside! Oh, inside, all breathless with excitement, all fluttery with what had happened to her . . . Lily Lou Lansing . . . Someone in love with her!

Ken Sargent was in love with her. Lily Lou knew it. Knew it with the unfailing intuition that tells the secret to every girl.

She used to study herself in the big mirror in her room, the room with the big feather bed and the marble-topped dresser and the two straight-backed chairs. The setting was all wrong . . . the cheap lace spread that someone had given to mother, the pink and blue silk cushions with the gold lace edging . . . but she was all right . . . pretty . . . she knew it . . .

She'd take the little ivory-backed mirror she had brought with her, stand in a bright light and study her white, flawless skin, her finely-arched eyebrows, her long, dark eyes, velvety soft . . .

It wasn't vanity. It was a sort of self-defense. She was thinking of it as part of her singing . . . her stage appearances . . . She was trying, oh, so hard to remember that she wasn't just the youngest Lansing, living in a funny little shed-like house, being squired around by the rich Sargent boy.

STAR IN MAKING

She was the girl who was going to be a star . . . a star who had a natural voice, and a dynamo of energy, and an iron will, and yes—a lovely face and figure . . . the girl who was going to see her name LILY LOU LANSING in electric lights, whose face would look back at her from magazines, from newspapers, from billboards . . .

When the soft, secret excitement, the thrill of Ken would sweep over her too strongly, she'd rush wildly to the piano . . . lift up her voice and sing . . .

Her mother, in the kitchen, or rocking on the porch, would listen, half afraid. She sensed, without realizing just what it was, that something was wrong. She thought that Lily Lou was working too hard. She wasn't quite herself.

"I love you, Lily Lou." It came to her often now, Ken's half-hesitating, half-coaxing whisper.

Though her whole being thrilled to it, she kept her voice steadily. "Don't be silly, Ken," she always said.

Lily Lou and Ken were on a raft.

And one night he surprised her.

"Kiss me goodbye, Lily Lou. I'm going back to town in the morning. I won't be seeing you again for a while."

She lifted her face, and he kissed her, gently. Then he got out and opened the door of the car, and walked with her up the dirt path to the door.

"Goodnight, Lily Lou."

He didn't even try to kiss her again.

Lily Lou stood on the porch. She watched him go. Watched him climb into the car, start the engine. He never even looked back. He couldn't be going, like that. Without a word, after all he'd told her about loving her . . . But he was! The car was moving . . . Lily Lou opened her mouth to call him—he shouldn't go like that! No sound came. Just a husky gurgle in her throat. Couldn't let him go . . . not like that . . . .

She ran down the path, tripped over the garden hose. A terrible cracking pain in her ankle. She screamed.

ALL IN A DAY

In Which the Customers Do the Work

By MARK HELLINGER

"PERHAPS THIS will interest you," writes an anonymous contributor. "Perhaps not. It's a real story of Broadway, and if you don't hold that against it, it should get over. The names are fictitious, and I haven't the time to give you anything more than the high spots. Pardon my staccato style.

"It was a sunny day in July, 1920. Frank Martin, manager of concert artists, was seated at his desk in the old Putnam Building. In another chair sat Mildred B———. The woman was a teacher in one of the smaller Jersey towns and she had a voice that was passable in choir work.

"She rarely received a booking. She was short—about 5 feet 2—and her looks were nothing to excite the world. She did have a nice personality, but it was not sufficient to balance her appearance.

"Mildred had a habit of borrowing from Frank Martin. He was a liberal sort of guy, and he had always been a sucker for a dame who cried about her troubles. With one thing and another, Mildred owed the agent some $300 up to the day we find them sitting together in his office.

"The phone rang. It was a swanky club on the outskirts of New York. They wanted someone for that evening; some woman with more beauty than voice. Frank Martin promised to have the right woman there for them.

"As Mildred sat there, the agent got busy. He called numerous singers, plenty of them beautiful. But at that particular time he was out of luck. It was a Saturday afternoon and it seemed as though everyone he phoned was at some beach or other.

"Mildred, of course, begged for the chance to fill the engagement. The agent argued that she would not do because the order called for a beautiful woman. But there was nothing he could do; no one he could reach. So Mildred got the job.

"Frank Martin gave her her instructions. She was to wear the most attractive gowns she owned. He explained the nature of the club and requested her to act exactly as he told her. She borrowed a few more dollars from him for a new pair of stockings and ran happily from the office.

"That night changed the girl's entire life. Mildred was wise enough to know that her personality was her greatest asset. She made full use of that knowledge on that particular night, and, inasmuch as there were no other women at the dinner, she must have appeared charming enough. As a matter of fact, there was one gentleman who became very much smitten with her.

"The man was worth several millions. Call him Richard Watson, because that's close enough. He owned a big factory in New York State, and he was coining money—but he had been most unfortunate in each of his two marriages. The first girl, the most famous woman of her time, stripped him of a million and divorced him. The second one did exactly the same thing.

"Whatever the reason—and perhaps it was because he was beginning to feel that beauty didn't make for happy marriages—Watson fell for Mildred in rapid fashion. Within a month they were married. He built her a magnificent home in the suburbs. They proved to be very happy.

"Two years after their marriage Watson died of pneumonia. He left everything to his wife—but she didn't know what to do with it. She sold his fine business, obtained two million dollars in cash and settled in a huge apartment in New York in order to spend her money in expert fashion.

"Meanwhile, things had not been going any too well with Frank Martin. He had, of course, followed her career — and he knew that she was now wading through plenty of money. He sent her a brief note and reminded her that she owed him some $300. Mildred didn't even take the trouble to answer that note. She sailed for Europe shortly after, and ignored the agent entirely.

"That settles it," he told a pal. 'I've been a fool all my life. I've been stuck before, but this is the worst piece of ingratitude that ever hit me. From now on, I'm as hard as all the rest!' . . .

"We skip some seven years now and find Frank Martin with an office in Paris, France, instead of Broadway. Things had grown so bad for him over here that he decided to try a new locale. And he was doing fairly well on the other side.

"The door opened one afternoon, and Mildred walked in. She cried bitter tears, said that she had gone through her entire fortune and was absolutely penniless. She begged the man to get her some kind of work, but the agent said he could do nothing for her.

"Mildred arose and walked toward the door. Suddenly, she turned.

"'Could you let me have a little money?' she asked. 'Just enough for a new pair of stockings and a bite eat?'

"The agent who had made up his mind to be as hard as the rest placed a hand in his pocket.

"'Sure, Mildred,' he said. 'How much do you want?'" . . .

"JUST ONE more question," writes 'Chickie' G., "to annoy you about the theater magnate whose theater was destroyed by fire. According to your most recent explanation, you stated that his regular secretary was ill and that the girl substituting for her did not know that her employer was unable to read.

"Now, what I am unable to get through my thick skull is this. Why did they place such an inefficient girl in such a position? Why should such a big man permit himself to be embarrassed by poor assistants? Does this seem reasonable to you—especially in view of the fact that every large office employs someone who is nearly if not wholly as competent as the secretary herself?

"Can you explain, sir?"

Certainly I can. This magnate not only has one assistant secretary, but five of them. There had been a big studio party the night before, however, and the boss had been nice enough to give them the day off to recuperate. Hence the new girl.

You see? . . .

"DEAR SIR:" writes Abraham Shapero, an attorney. "Your short story that appeared this morning on the subject of appreciation is by no means bullethole-proof. You should have a legal staff to edit your work whenever legal subjects appear therein, because if you do not you might become the subject of attack by the legal profession, in general.

"John Smith has a perfect legal defense to the action, inasmuch as the person to whom he had 'loaned' his car himself was injured and did not injure a third party, in which event Mr. Smith would then become liable. This appreciative person, having driven the car himself, is guilty of what we term in law 'contributory negligence,' and cannot recover from his benefactor. Is that clear?"

No, sir . . .

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS Junior Komic Club

Singing contests between the boys and girls of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club are becoming popular features at the chapter meetings. In some theaters the boys are sitting on one side of the house and the girls on the other to make it easier to make a decision between the singing groups.

The contest at the South Hills Chapter was led by Joe Cardilla for the boys and Maru Zerman for the girls. Other events on the program were a violin solo by James Harrington, songs by Francis Marone and Mary Papp, acrobatic tap dance by Louise Foley and songs by Joseph Cardilla.

There was a big crowd at the Prince (Ambridge) meeting Saturday. After the opening ceremonies, Myrna Heberling took over the meeting as master of ceremonies. The program consisted of a song and dance by Winifred Barclay, toe dance by Marie Simon and Ellen Llewellyn, toe dance by Jane Smith, tap by the Estep sisters, and a song by Myrna Heberling.

More than 500 Wilmerding boys and girls turned out at the Crystol Theater for the opening of the Sun-Telegraph Junior Komic Club in that district Saturday. Louis Bacco was elected grand jester with the following group as board of governors: Vincent Matorazzo, Raymond Missavage, Earnest Pecoro, Virginia Robed, Ruby Crystal and Mildred Allshouse.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Isn't it true that you expect your friends to overlook your disagreeable traits?

As friends, you expect them to ignore your shortcomings and love and respect you in spite of them.

About the only person so minded is your mother.

She can and will make excuses for you, whether you deserve it or not.

She will stand a lot; but even she suffers as a result of your thoughtless rudeness or lack of consideration.

You bank too much on friends that they will understand and continue to take your outbursts of temper, your shabby treatment of them and the selfishness you exhibit.

True friendship will stand much, but, subjected to continual strain, the best of friends are going to break with you.

The friends you have were attracted to you by your winning qualities, by the pleasure they experienced in your society.

If you had shown your disagreeable side at the first they would not have classed themselves as among your intimates.

It is better to keep friends than to make them.

English leaders are advocating a plan whereby Great Britain would pay her debts to us in goods.

It might work out. For example, she could send us $500,000,000 worth of spats.

* * *

This would give the farmers a superiority complex, causing them to move to cities.

* * *

With everybody wearing spats, everybody would think everybody else was prosperous. And as prosperity is a matter of psychology, everything would be hotsy totsy.

Not Private Business

Commissioner C. M. Barr Assumes an Indefensible Position Regarding the County's Affairs.

Some things have occurred at the Courthouse during the last few days that have disappointed friends of the new county administration.

Director John W. Vickerman, of the Elections Bureau, sent all employes a questionnaire in which they were required to say, among other things, who their political sponsors were, and with what political organizations they were connected.

The public thought when the present County Commissioners went into office that all that sort of thing was to be done away with—that men were to be chosen for jobs because of their ability and would not have to be sponsored by politicians and belong to an organization. It was far from the voters' wishes when they smashed one machine that another should be set up at the Courthouse in its stead.

Vickerman's excuse that he desired to know the employes' political connections because he thought it might be helpful in demonstrating voting machines is rather weak.

A reactionary spirit has also been shown by County Commissioner C. M. Barr. When he found that news in regard to Vickerman's questionnaire had leaked to the Sun Telegraph, he proposed to forbid county employes to talk to newspaper men. The county business, according to Barr, should be conducted just like private business.

The Commissioner is making a serious mistake. The county's business is public business, and should be conducted as such, with everything open and aboveboard. Barr and his colleagues will be unfaithful to the trust reposed in them by the independent voters who put them in office if they adopt the discredited methods of the repudiatd machine.

Council Is Interested

The Inquiry Concerning the Cost of an Electric Rate Investigation Is Encouraging.

The cloud no bigger than a man's hand that developed in Council yesterday in the inquiry concerning the cost of an investigation of electric rates may develop into a storm—a storm sorely needed to clear the atmosphere—if the public does its part.

There is good reason to believe that the electric rates charged Pittsburghers are unreasonably high. They are higher than the rates in most of the other large cities in this part of the United States, and Charles P. Lang, assistant city solicitor in charge of public utilities matters, has publicly said he considers them too high.

The Brookline Board of Trade reflected public sentiment in calling on City Council to join with other municipal bodies in a campaign to get the rates reduced, and it is encouraging to see the city fathers showing at least a faint interest in the matter. It is to be hoped other civic and trade bodies as well as individual citizens will bring pressure to bear.

New Coal Rate Plans

It Is Gratifying to Learn That All Ways to Get Relief From Unfair Charges Have Not Been Exhausted.

Hope revives that Pittsburgh may yet get justice in the rates for transportation of coal to the Great Lakes.

Notwithstanding that the Interstate Commerce Commission has refused to widen the spread between the rate for shipping coal from Pittsburgh to the Lakes and the rate for shipping lake cargo coal from the Southern West Virginia and Kentucky fields, there is still a possibility that relief may be obtained.

Two ways of reopening the question have been suggested. One way is to appeal to the Pennsylvania and other northern railroads voluntarily to reduce the rate from Pittsburgh to the lakes.

The southern railroads voluntarily reduced their rate in 1927 to help the southern operators. Why should not the northern roads do as much for their customers?

In 1925 it cost $1.91 to ship a ton of coal from Southern West Virginia to the lakes—a distance, from the Kanawha field, of 370 miles. The rate from Pittsburgh to the lakes was $1.66 for the 172-mile haul. The Interstate Commerce Commission found the 25-cent differential was too narrow and ordered the rate from Pittsburgh reduced to $1.46, thus increasing the spread to 45 cents.

But the southern roads promptly reduced their rate to $1.71, thereby restoring the 25-cent differential. After a great deal of litigation the northern and southern roads compromised on a 35-cent differential, which was effected by raising the southern rate to $1.81. And that is how the matter now stands.

Pittsburgh coal operators have virtually lost their valuable lake cargo trade because of the ridiculously low rate—ridiculous, that is, in comparison with ours—that is enjoyed by the southern operators. The whole community has suffered in consequence.

The Pennsylvania and other northern railroads have suffered from the loss of the local lake cargo coal trade, and the loss has not been compensated for, it is believed, by the increase in the coal traffic from the south, for the Pennsylvania's share of the $1.81 paid by the southern operator for shipping a ton of coal to the Great Lakes is only 80 or 90 cents a ton.

If, then, the Pennsylvania and other northern roads could be induced to reduce their rate to $1.26, thus raising the differential to 45 cents, the lowest figure at which the local operators can compete with the south, the local coal business would revive, and the railroads probably would make more money than the loss of the southern business would cost them.

There is one other possible way out for the Pittsburgh operators, and that is to persuade the Public Service Commission of Pennsylvania to order a lower railroad rate than now obtains for the entirely intra-state haul from Pittsburgh to Erie. This is an aspect of the matter that is particularly worthy of the attention of the Greater Pennsylvania Council.

It would be a little awkward for the local operators, to be sure, to have to ship all their lake cargo coal to Erie by a route that at no point crossed the state line; but if that is the only way by which a rate can be obtained which will permit Pittsburgh to regain the huge coal business that it has lost during the last few years to West Virginia, that remedy should be sought.

It is gratifying to learn the operators have a few more arrows left in their quiver.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—I strolled along Broadway last evening comparing its tawdriness to the splendor of yesteryear. About all left of its heyday is the glitter. The great restaurants—Rector's, Churchill's, Shanley's and the Knickerbocker—are gone. Scenery-eating actors have given away to pansy performers.

The Empire alone is the last stand of the Broadway legitimate theater. The Astor is the sole survivor of the luxurious hotels flourishing a decade ago. The Paramount cinema is claimed by Broadway, but is in reality reared on Seventh avenue.

Broadway of today is mostly a zig-zag of haberdashery shops, clattery lunchrooms, gown and perfume parlors, souvenir stores, walkup tailors and tabloids. Here and there in the motley array are catchpenny photo studios and storerooms given over to advertising demonstrations.

A touch of the Broadway that is gone is the black and gold sign over Churchill's old stand, reading, "Irving Berlin Publishing Company." The Winter Garden, once stronghold of the musical revue, is now flamboyantly crisscrossed with a ballyhoo for movies inside.

What is most impressive in the shifting change to the old street is the character of its promenaders. Once a walk along it provided a closeup of reigning theatrical stars, brightly rouged chorus beauties, celebrated song writers, jockeys, fight champions and deepsea gamblers.

Too, there were dazzling spenders such as Foxhall Keene with his Desperate Desmond mustache and Freddie Gebhart, raconteurs such as Wilson Mizner and gourmets such as Diamond Jim. Also, Canfield, the gambler; Thorley, the florist, and his lapel carnation; John, the barber, and O'Malley of the Sun.

The passing parade today reveals drab pastels of tired Jersey commuters, tin horn sports, barkers for talkies, seedy sandwich men, tattered buskers dancing for pitched coins, third-rate ladies on the make, yap wagon "decoys," and visiting lodgemen who imagine they are seeing the town.

* * *

In the old days Sunday nights at Shanley's lured Broadway regulars. They sat at large tables, watching the floor show, sipping beer from perspiring mugs and indulging merry palaver. Over yonder Lillian Russel, Joe Weber and Lew Fields. Nearby Julia Sanderson and the diminutive fashion plate, Tod Sloane. Also the tall darkly Oriental Nicky Arnstein with the boydenish lady we know as Fannie Brice. Richard Harding Davis, silk stockinged reporter with the silver crooked talking stick, and Charlie Somerville who wrote his spicy but kindly White Way gossip for the World. Once in a while the pontifical Jim Huneker deserted Luchow's wassail for camaraderie of Shanleys in tow of Ben de Casseres. The "Merry Widow" waltz was "the" tune. Roast fowl and apple dumplings with Brown Betty sauce were Shanley's piece de resistance.

* * *

A favored haunt of those days was Joel's, which had the wainscoted coziness of a country inn. Downstairs the bar and upstairs the jumbled cafe with walls hung with welcoming placards for returning troupers. Joel was the Rialto Rothschild. Piff-awmers sent him savings to bridge over summers "At Liberty." Joel was Joel Rinaldo, a queer bird of the Broadway night who twittered erudite tomes on the polygeneric theory and served Blue Moon cocktails that would knock you stiff as Menjou's evening shirts. He was an uncle of Mark Hellinger, who carries on the avuncular ambition writing tabloid threnodies for the Broadway miserere. Joel, himself, has retired to a porch of a quiet Brooklyn street to rock, read the classics and meditate upon the blessed promises. A noble Roman, Joel!

* * *

Joel's would receive a high-nosed sniff amid the speakeasy splendor of the era, yet it was packed with more of the exciting patina called glamour than modern mosques with continental assurance and urban decore. And here I am all of a sudden at the end of the column with scarcely room for a bow. I don't gauge my boss well lately anyhow.

Marry-Go-Round

How to Boss a Woman

Nine times out of ten, if a man would tell a woman the honest truth, she'd forgive him for anything on earth—and blame "the other woman."

* * *

But, to be FRANK with a woman is against all masculine psychology—and besides, he just hates to be "forgiven!"

Not that a man wants to be deceitful or enjoys lying to the woman he loves. But it's the "easiest way." Any man hates to have to resort to prevarication, from the wedding day to the grave. He would much rather tell a woman that he DID stop at the corner speakeasy; that he was out lunching with the new stenographer; that he HAS had a couple of drinks; that he did forget that it was their wedding anniversary!

* * *

* * *

He would much rather tell a girl frankly that her nose is stubby and that she would never be a riot at a beauty show, but that he loves her, anyway, than perjure his soul and strain his imagination in the effort to invent a lot of flattering fibs.

He would much rather telephone her that he is going on a wild party, or that he's sitting in at an all-night poker game, than invent a committee meeting or a "conference." But that would mean an argument—and how could he "get away with it?"

* * *

No married man really desires to resort to pretext and equivocation in order to get out of the house evenings. It is a great nuisance and a positive cross to any man, to have to watch his step, clean out his pockets, chew peppermints, and avoid looking at a "come-hither blonde." But "anything to keep the peace"—ANYTHING to keep the peace!

* * *

As a matter of fact, nine modern women out of ten are PERFECTLY reasonable. But, almost every man is a "Jiggs" at heart, and imagines that he's married to a tyrant "Maggie." His motto is "Peace—and perfect liberty—at any price." Yet, if a man only had the courage and the commonsense to look a woman in the eye, tell her the TRUTH, and ask her what she's going to DO about it, he'd be astonished to see how meekly and "reasonably" she'd take it. That's the only way to boss a woman!

How to Cure Hoarding; Debate on France

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

Mr. Hoover has an undying faith in the virtue of commissions and committees. Finding that the loss of confidence among the people has resulted in the "hoarding" of money, he calls a conference of business men and bankers who resolve to drag this hidden money out from its hiding place and put it in circulation. This is going to be done through the medium of "education." The people of small means, fearful lest their savings be swept away, are to be roundly scolded for their loss of faith—by the people who gave ample reasons for the panic fear.

The President wants them to invest their money in "conservative stocks" or deposit it in banks that it may be loaned.

They stopped investing in stocks because of the memorable licking the small investor got two years ago on the market; and the timid became fearful of banks because of the unprecedented number of failures during the Hoover regime.

The fact that at the height of the absurdity of the gambling saturnalia on the market, when many began to doubt and pause in investments, the administration and preceding administration assured them that all was sound and well, and thus led many like sheep to the shambles, has destroyed the faith of the average man, with hard won money, in the assurances of the administration.

How are Mr. Hoover's conferees going to drag this money, which belongs to the people who have it, out from its hiding place?

* * *

Refuses to Consider Prosperity Loan

Thus far Mr. Hoover's two great plans for the restoration of confidence have failed to work.

There is another plan which he stubbornly refuses to consider—a prosperity loan of from three to five billion dollars to put millions of jobless men on a payroll, for work that is needed and will add billions in wealth to the nation through public improvements.

If Mr. Hoover and his advisors want to get the money in hiding out let him offer this loan to the people and see how quickly the hoarded money emerges to buy the bonds.

The hoarder is not just a miser with a twisted brain; he has worked hard for his money and skimped himself to save, and he would rather have interest on his money than keep it buried where it cannot grow.

But he is afraid of stocks just now, and, rightly or wrongly, he is afraid of banks, but he is not afraid of the safety of a government loan.

When this money emerges to buy government bonds, it goes into circulation, into wages, into purchases at stores, and it furnishes fuel for cold furnaces, and goes far to restore prosperity and confidence. And with confidence restored the industrial bonds that are "conservative" will be bought, and the hoarded money hereafter will be a memory.

Let this new commission or committee consider that way out.

Turn Propaganda On Germany, Instead

With the disarmament conference in session, France moves, or is moved, into the white light, with her friends and critics hammering each other over the head. France had her inning the other night when the France American Society in New York gave an "amity" dinner in commemoration of the treaties of 1778 and Yorktown. Here protests were made against an alleged "wave of anti-French propaganda" in this country. We have observed nothing rising to the dignity of propaganda, but this does not disprove its existence.

However, in the speeches made, it does seem to us that there was not a little propaganda against Germany—the sort with which we became all too familiar during the war. The purport of the speeches was that the German reparations are not too high; and that Germany can, sooner or later, meet her reparations obligations. Much was said about the sanctity of a contract or treaty.

This made necessary a stand against the "cancellation"—to use the fraudulent term intended to deceive the American people—of the debts due us. One simply cannot blow hot and cold.

* * *

Guthrie Attacks Foreign Bankers

William D. Guthrie, distinguished lawyer and head of the society, set forth the theory that the French believe that Germany borrowed far more money at handsome interest from America and English bankers than she paid out in reparations; and then, finding she could borrow no more, used President Hoover to get a moratorium. Mr. Guthrie is convinced Germany can pay in time; and that the policy in the crisis is to postpone payments, if necessary, but to hold on to the treaty obligation. And then he turns to the propaganda for the transfer of the debts of 14 nations to us:

"Certainly we should not urge France to release Germany in order that the hundreds of millions of dollars that our bankers loaned to Germany may be more readily repaid. English bankers borrowed enormous sums from France at 4 per cent interest and then loaned it to Germany at 8 per cent, and these very bankers are now urging that their debts be given priority over the French claims for reparations. The same is true, alas, of many of our bankers. They too were tempted by high rates of commissions and interest to risk hundreds of millions of American money."

Even so, the reparations controversy is not our business—since we refused reparations. But the plan to "cancel" or transfer the debts of other peoples, who owe them, to our people, who made them, is our business.

* * *

Maintains Her Army, But Shirks Debts

The speeches did not go much into the character of the criticism of France.

Just now the average American is not concerning himself much with the French demand for the reparations. The attack takes another line. It is that France has built up the most powerful military machine the world has known since Napoleon; that she refuses to consider the limitation of armament by land and has always stood in the way of such an agreement; that this forces other nations to maintain unreasonable military establishments, and this means burdening mankind with taxes that are destroying us all. The fact that she has formed military alliances with other nations has an evil look.

Lloyd George, by no means impartial, says she has the "most formidable military machine the world has ever known," and reminds us that part of the contract, which Mr. Guthrie thinks sacred, was that after reducing Germany's army to nothing, the other nations would reasonably reduce armament. Instead, the world is more heavily armed today than before the World War. And then he puts his finger on the thing that the average American does complain about:

"While professing her inability to find means wherewith to pay her debts to Britain and America, or even her own frugal peasants, France advanced large sums to enable her allies to purchase cannon and other munitions of war."

And the indications are that the present disarmament conference will come to nothing because of the refusal of France to reduce.

At this hour France and her military allies can raise an army of 10,000,000 men; Germany is allowed an army of 100,000. Just how much "security" does a nation with 10,000,000 need against a nation with 100,000?

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Cut this article out. Then answer it six months from now.

On the day on which this is written, the President's $2,000,000,000 Reconstruction Finance Corporation bill goes into effect. And now, what will happen?

The whole nation wants to know. But, out of that number, 28,493,500 NEED to know, very badly and immediately.

Of these people, 8,000,000 by our latest check-up, are totally unemployed and 14,493,500 people, including the idle men and women themselves, are affected by that unemployment. Affected to the point of starvation.

Also 7,000,000 more people are on "skeleton" time and wages, with 7,000,000 others pinching with them.

There are, in America, 122,000,000 persons, counting children, so approximately ONE-QUARTER OF THE POPULATION OF AMERICA IS EITHER TOTALLY UNEMPLOYED, PARTIALLY EMPLOYED, OR DRASTICALLY AFFECTED BY UNEMPLOYMENT.

And they're all asking today: "What's going to happen, now?"

They are not asking it quietly, or indifferently, or with an eye on financial or political eventualities. They know nothing of finance—nothing of politics. They only know very simple, very elemental things—HUNGER, COLD, SICKNESS, TERROR, DEATH.

"Two billions of relief voted? What does that mean? Does that mean relief for US? Does that mean that Jim will get a job THIS WEEK? Does that mean we can get medicine for the baby, school shoes for Eddie, a warm overcoat for dad, pay for the butcher and grocer—NOW?"

That's what they are asking, and there is a reason for their terrible urgency. Days are not longer a matter of time for many of those 28,493,500. THEY REPRESENT THE LAST, BRIEF, DESPERATE GAP BETWEEN HOPE AND DESPAIR — BETWEEN LIFE AND DEATH.

Relief won't be "just as good if it comes next month." It must come NOW—it must come THIS WEEK—if it is to save thousands of Americans from complete ruin. Is it going to come now?

That's easy—tragically easy—to answer. It isn't going to come now. Jim won't get his this week. We've waited too long. Things can't be mended as quickly as that.

THE BANKER MUST BE HELPED FIRST.

He must feel the money in his own hands. He must mend the worst gaps in his own fence. Meanwhile, of course, he will be encouraged and advised to do the right thing by the American citizen. Then, in his own good time—SAID GOOD TIME BEING LEFT ENTIRELY UP TO THE BANKER—he will get around to helping the poor man.

BUT HOW SOON WILL THAT BE?

There's a time clause in that bill—for the poor man. If he doesn't get help soon—very, very soon—it's taps for him. Nothing less.

BUT THERE'S NO TIME CLAUSE IN THAT BILL FOR THE MEN WHO ARE GOING TO HANDLE THAT TWO BILLION DOLLARS.

No one has said: "If you do not get direct and adequate relief to at least eight millions of American citizens within the next two weeks, you will be fined, jailed and eventually deported."

A time clause for the poor man—and that time clause means death. But there's no time clause for the rich man. No one has told him when he must perform, what will happen to him if he doesn't. No one has even threatened to slap him on the wrist.

So now we're wondering, you and I, just when and how he will perform? How many will die before aid reaches them?

WILL AID EVER REACH THEM—OR WILL THE WORLD FUND GO TO MENDING THE GAPS IN THE RICH MAN'S FENCE?
